Sarum. The present appearance of Old Sarum is a desolate mound, rising from a valley on the west, and connected with a ridge towards the east: on the centre of the hill the citadel was placed, guarded by a deep fosse on the outside and a bold rampart within: the enclosed area, about 500 and a bold rampart within: the enclosed week, about 500 feet in diameter, had on its eastern side the principal entrance, with defensive works: a large area surrounded the citadel, which was again environed by a bank and ditch: these enclosed the chief part of the old city, and measure? furlongs 36 yards in circumference, containing an area of 271 acres of ground. The borough of Old Sarum returned two members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I. and Under a tree about a quarter of a mile from the church of Stratford-under-the-Castle, is pointed out the spot where the members for the borough were elected. As much as £80,000 or £70,000 is said to have been paid for a small estate containing the sites of the houses within the borough of Old Sarum. It was formerly extra-parochial, but is now a parish in the Alderbury union: it is still extra-parochial as to ecclesiastical matters.

The Dean and Chapter of Salisbury are lords of the manor and chief landowners. The soil and subsoil are chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,483, including the borough of Old Sarum; rateable value, £2,966; and the population in 1871 was 295, and of Old Sarum, 12.

There are Wesleyan, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels.

Handsome Gothic schools were erected in 1871, at a cost of £2,600. There are National, Infant and Sunday schools. A School Board has been formed here and schools are in course of erection. A Board School was opened at Gorse Hill in September, 1878, to hold 450 children.

The charities amount to £70 yearly.

A large Assembly-room was erected about 1850, attached to the Goddard Arms hotel, and balls and concerts are held in it. The Town Hall was executed by a company in 1859.

in it. The Town Hall was erected by a company in 1852; county courts and magistrates' meetings are held in it. The increase in the business of the corn market necessitated the erection, in 1867, of a Corn Exchange, a spacious and elegant building.

The markets are held on Mondays for pitched corn, and every second and last Monday for fat cattle. There are four fairs in the year, two under a charter granted to the lord of the manor in the reign of Charles J.—viz. on the second Monday after May the 11th and the second Monday. in December: also two statute fairs for hiring servant-viz. on the first Monday before April the 5th and on the second Monday after September the 11th. The cattle market and fairs are held in the main street; the supply of earthe had much decreased on account of the want of proper accommodation, till the late Mr. William Dore originated periodical sales of cattle in grounds purchased by him, and has succeeded in establishing one of the most important cattle markets in the West of England. Messrs. Descon &

Liddiard have established a horse repository.

There are three newspapers, published weekly, the "North Wilts Herald," the "Swindon Advertiser," and the "New Swindon Express."

Quarries of colite, well adapted for building purposes and giving employment to numerous workmen. are abundant immense quantities of fossil and other remains are found, immense quantities of fossil and other remains are found, which are highly interesting to geologists: Professor Smith, one of the earliest geologists of this country, spent much time in inspecting these quarries. The railway, canal, quarries and general agricultural pursuits furnish employment for the working population. Within a mile and a half of the town, on the Liddington road, is a beautiful lake of 80 acres, the reservoir for supplying the Wilts and Berks canal, which passes through the parish within half a mile of the towa: it is delightfully situated in a picturesque district, beautifully wooded; the water abounds with fish, including pile of extraordinary size, affording abundant amusement to the of extraordinary size, affording abundant amusement to the lovers of angling.

The principal residence is The Lawn, a large and handsome house in the Italian style, the seat of Ambrose Leth-bridge Goddard esq. M.P. who is lord of the manor, but at present occupied by Sir Christopher Rawlinson. A. L. Goddard esq. M.P. and Vilett Robinson esq. are the principal landowners.

The hill on which the Old Town stands is of sand at stone, surrounded by Kimmeridge clay, mostly covered with a rich alluvial soil. The adjoining farms are mostly paster. The area in acres is 3,136; rateable value, £92,467; the population in 1851 (including Swindon New Town) was 4,876; in 1861 it was 6,856, and in 1871 was 11,720, and now (1880) estimated at 20,000; the great increase in the population is principally caused by the number of men employed at the station and works of the Great Western Railway Company, from which circumstance, and the general improvements in all parts of the town, Swindon may now, erhaps, be said to be one of the most flourishing towns in Wiltshire.

Swindon New Town (or New Swindon) was formerly a marsh, but since the construction of the Great Western railway has become a considerable town, about a mile and a quarter north from Old Swindon, in the hundred of Cricklade and county court district of Swindon. Here is the junction station of the Great Western railway: every is the junction station of the Great Western railway: every train stops here as well for changing engines as for refreshment of passengers: at this station the line from Gloucester, Hereford and South Wales joins the main line; and a company has been formed to construct a railway from this junction to Andover junction, through Marlborough and Ludgershall, which will give a direct communication between Manchester and the North and Southampton.

New Swindon is also the centre of the Great Western railway works, and the factory for the whole of the line, with its numerous ramifications. The locomotive works are on an extensive scale. The carriage works cover an area of eight acres, and, together with the iron foundry and boiler works, employ a large number of hands: the entire works cover about eighty-two acres of ground.

The town is regularly built, partly on the land belonging to the company, and chiefly occupied by the persons em-ployed in the works: there are a number of handsome shops, and the town is improving and increasing very fast; it is lighted with gas and governed by a local Board of Health of twelve members. The Wiltshire and Berkshire canal passes in the immediate vicinity.

In 1846 New Swindon was formed into an ecclesiastical parish. The church of St. Mark is a handsome stone structure, in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, with tower and spire and 1 bell. The register dates from 1845. The living is a vicarage, of the value of £250, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Glouesster and Bristol and held by the Hon. and Rev. Maurice John George Ponsonby M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford.

There are schools, supported by the Great Western Railway Company and by weekly payments by the pupils: apwards of 1,350 children receive instruction. New and handsome school rooms were erected in College street in 1873 for girls and infants, the old building being now used for boys.

There are Catholic, Baptist, Wesleyan, Unitarian and Welsh Methodist chapels.

There is a market house for meat, fish and vegetables; public baths are also established.

The Mechanics' Institution, established in 1843, is a noile building, having a library containing upwards of 10,000 volumes: lectures, concerts and dramatic performances are frequently given in it: it has 4,000 members. A free recreation ground, with permanent pavilion, has been established for the use of cricketers, of whom there are several clubs.

The soil and subsoil are clay. The chief crops are grass. The area is 790 acres; the population in 1861 was 4.167, and in 1871 was 7,628, which is also the Local Board district.

TEFFONT EWYAS, or EVIAS (as it is termed in the medieval Latin of ancient records), is a parish and village in the Southern division of the county, Dunworth hundred, Hindon petty sessional division, Tibury union, distance and archidectury Shaftesbury courty court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Salisbury and rural deanery of Chalke first pertion, situated 1½ miles west from Diston station on the South Western ated 13 miles west from Diston station on the South Western railway, 5 miles east from Hindon, 93 north-east from Shaftesbury and 94 from London. The church (not dedicanced) is in the Decorated etyle, having a lofty ornamented tower with 3 bells, surmounted by a beautiful spire 125 feet in height: a transept was added in 1824: the interior has several bandsome stained windows, painted chiefly by Mrs. De Salis. The manor chapel is private property, and divided from the charch by a carved cak screen, being attached on the south side to the chancel, and opening into it by two arches: it is the most ancient part of the present busilding, and contains the tombs of some of the Ley family (former loads of Testont manor, one of whem married a Mayne), with three recumbers figures of knights in armour: Mr. De Salia, the lerd of the manor, who has also had placed over the cast window a marble mural tarsia, representing a choir of angels singing Hallelujah, a work of high art executed by the late Baren de Triqueti, the celebrated sculptor employed by the Queen to decorate in a similar manner the Wolsey Chapel at Windsor. The register dates from the year 1683. The living is a rectory, value £240, with residence, in the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Fane De Salis, and held by the Rev. William Ryton Andrews M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The rectory house was rebuilt by the late Sir G. G. Scott, in 1842: it is of stone. Here is a quarry, from which was taken the stone of which Salis. is a quarry, from which was taken the stone of which Salisbury Cathedral was built: the workings extend for mary acres under ground, forming extensive caverns, often visited by tourists; since the opening of the Salisbury and Yeovillane these quarries have been conjugated. by tourists; since the opening of the Salisbury and Yeovil line, these quarries have been again worked to a considerable extent: they yield a stone of the best Portland description. The village is very picturesque: a beautiful brook winds its course by the side of the road, on the right, backed by a skrubby wood, with a cottage here and there on its edge, and on the opposite side the ground rises into a steep, crowned with vegetation. Teffont Manor is an ancient mansion, of the date of Henry VII. the seat of William Peace De Salis esq. J.P.: the house contains much valuable carried ask faratures with a reboke college compared one carved oak farniture, with a choice gallery, comprising original paintings by Jean de Manbuse, Pietro Perugino, Giulio Romano and other artists, with several portraits of the French Imperial family, by Le Fevre, formerly part of the private gallery of Napoleon I. at Fontainehleau. TISBURY is a large village and head of a union, with and there are some excellent quarries, producing stone for a station on the London and South Western railway; it consists, for civil purposes, of three parishes, viz., Bast TISBURY, WEST TISBURY, and WARDOUR, which for ecclesiastical purposes form only one parish; it is in the the quarries, it has become an article of great demand. Suthern division of the county, Dunworth hundred, Shaftesbury county court district, Hindon petty sessional division, Chalke rural deanery second portion, archdeaconry and diocese of Salisbury. The village of Tisbury, about 3 miles south from Hindon, 14 west from Salisbury, 8 northmiles south from Hindon, 14 west from Salisbury, 8 northeast from Shaftesbury, 96‡ from London, is situated on the sharp declivity of a hill; and in the valley below is the parish church and the river Nadder, which rises in the parish of Donhead St. Mary, and winds its way to Salisbury. The church of St. John the Baptist, supposed to have been built about 1226, is a fine old building, in the Barly English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, in the form of a cross, consisting of nave, with aisles, chancel, and transepts:

with a tower rising from the intersection and containing 6 balls: there was formerly a loft unice but it was destroyed bells: there was formerly a lofty spire, but it was destroyed by lightning: beneath the altar are interred many of the former Lords Arundell of Wardour, and the helmet of the first lord of that name stands over his tomb: the church contains many objects of antiquity: the font is very ancient. In the churchyard is an immense yew tree, measuring 30 feet in circumference, which is supposed to have been planted before the building of the church. The register dates from before the building of the church. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £301, with residence, in the gift of V. F. Benett-Stanford esq. m. P. and held by the Rev. Francis Edmund Hutchinson mc. A. of University College, Oxford. Here are National schools for boys, girls, and infants; likewise British and Catholic schools, and a Church of England school at New-schools are adopting the first yearly derived from lands. town, with an endowment of £50 yearly, derived from lands in the neighbourhood, let on building leases; the school at Newtown, together with one at Chicksgrove, are used as chapels, Church services being held therein. Here are Wealeyan and Congregational chapels. The charities for distribution in bread, clothes, and money amount to £80 yearly. Here is a large pile of buildings, formerly a convent of some extent, under the direction of the Abbess of Shaftesbarry—now, and for many years past, occupied as a farm—house with out-buildings. This is a fine agricultural district;

Salisbury and Yeovil line passing within a short distance of the quarries, it has become an article of great demand. Situated on an eminence, and overlooking the surrounding country, is the Castle of Wardour, built in 1776, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Arundell of Wardour: it is a splendid edifice, containing numerous suites of apartments; incorporated with the mansion is a beautiful Catholic chapel, richly fitted up, and containing a series of paintings: the extensive park and pleasure grounds are flanked by plantations, adorned with numerous groups of stately forest trees. In the vicinity are the ruins of the old Castle of Wardour, an the vicinity are the ruins of the old Castle of Wardour, and the earthworks that were thrown up by the Parliamentary army when they laid siege to that fortress: it was surrendered, after a lengthened siege, by Blanche, Lady Arundell, and afterwards destroyed by order of Lord Arundell, who caused a mine to be sprung, by which the castle was dismantled, and the Parliamentarians dislodged. Pyt House, the seat of Versa Fans Benett-Stanford and Pyt House, the seat of Vere Fane Benett-Stanford esq.
M.P. is a fine old mansion, with heavy porticoss over the principal entrances; the family are descended from Col. Benett, who was M.P. for Shaftesbury in the reign of Charles I.: the who was M.P. for Shaftesbury in the reign of Charles I.: the house, standing on high ground, commands some fine views, among others kingsettle hill, and is situated amid a beautifully-arranged park of 150 acres. Lord Arundell of Wardour is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Vere Fane Benett-Stanford esq. M.P. Alfred Morrison esq. William Wyndham esq. and Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. The soil is various, some light loam, elay and stone, and light chalk; subsoil, clay and gravel, chalk and flint, and sandstone. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley, and pasturage. mother church, formerly a Baptist chapel; it is capable of seating between 500 and 600 persons, and has a Gothic chancel and handsome window, with a figure of St. Stephen,

The market days are Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday; and a fair is held annually on the 5th, 6th and 7th of Angust.

The chief employment of the inhabitants is the manufacture of kerseymere, broad and other woollen cloths, each lished here as early as the reign of Henry VIII. and now the largest in the West of England.

Trowbridge as far as regards the regular force is attached to the Western military district, the remainder of Witshire being included in the Southern district. The artiller barracks, situated on the Frome road, are capable of containing about 150 men.

There are fire engines and two fire brigades connected with Mesers. Palmer and Mackay's and Mesers. Webb! factories, who also are volunteers for service in the town.

George Keats, the poet, was born here in 1729, and did in 1797. The site of the old castle, held by the Empres Matilda against King Stephen, may be recognised by a mound called Court Hill, but the castle itself has long disappeared.

Trowbridge was formerly a royal manor, and was given by Henry VIII. to the Somerset family, in whose possession it remained until the marriage of Lady Frances Seymout, daughter of Algernon, seventh Duke of Somerset, with the Marquis of Granby, afterwards Duke of Rutland, from whose family it was purchased by the late Thomas Timbrell examl is now held by William Stancombe esq. J.P. of Blonts Court, Potterne, who purchased the manor from the Timbrell family.

The lord of the inferior manor of Trowbridge Dannier is Rarl Manvers.

18 Mari Manvers.

The area is 2,442 acres; rateable value, £34,471; the population in 1861 was 10,487, and in 1871 was 11,672, including Staverton and Studley; and of the Local Board district, 11,508.

WESTBURY is a parliamentary borough, polling place for the Southern division of the county, station on the Great Western railway, union town, head of a county court, and parish, in the rural deanery of Wylye second portion, and Salisbury archdesconry and diocess, 109½ miles from London, 26 north-west from Salisbury, 4½ north from Warminster, and 5 south from Trowbridge. The town, which cives name to the hundred is very ancient, and is supminster, and 5 south from Trowbridge. The town, which gives name to the hundred, is very ancient, and is supposed to have been the scene of an engagement between Alfred and the Danes in the year 890, to commemorate which there is a figure of a horse, of enormous size, cut on the side of BRATTON HILL, which is commonly called BRATTON CASTLE; the soil being chalk, it can be distinctly seen for many miles: in 1873 a committee was formed, comprising the principal of the parisbioners, by whom the horse was thoroughly repaired, at an expense of £40, and is now cleaned when necessary. In the town stands the Market House, erected in the year 1815 by the late Sir Manasseh Massey Lopes bart, and now serves as a Town Hall, in which the County Court is held bi-monthly. In the reign of Henry IV. Westbury had a charter of incorporation granted, and has a mayor, recorder, and twelve corporation granted, and has a mayor, recorder, and twelve capital burgesses; but the mayor exercises no magisterial authority. The borough returns one member to Parliament. The church of All Saints is a very beautiful building having chancel (built in 1863), nave with a fine tower, in the Perpendicular style, containing 6 deep-toned bells: he windows of the chancel are stained, and it is paved with encaustic tiles: in 1867 the whole of the stonework vith encaustic tiles: in 1867 the whole of the stonework ras restored, a new floor put down, and the church re-seated rith oak: a handsome pulpit was provided; the alterations ost between £3,000 and £4,000; it contains, among others, flue monument to James Ley, first Earl of Marlborough, and Lord Treasurer ob. 1629. The register dates from the ear 1566. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of bilton annexed, yearly value £385, with residence and 33 cress of glebe, and in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury and held by the Rev. Henry Hinxman Duke B.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and surrogate. There are two Congregational chapels, one for Baptists, and one for Wesleyans. Here is a cemetery of 5 acres, with two mortuary chapels, and an entrance lodge on the Bratton road, opened on the 12th of May 1857. John Matravers' legacy of £1,000, in £3 per Cent. Consols, is for the support of a boys' British school in Westbury. The charties for distribution amount to £300. The charities for distribution amount to £200 Westbury. The charities for distribution amount to £200 yearly. John Matravers esq. by will, dated 26th April, 1814, gave to his trustees £1,000, free of legacy duty, to purchase clothing annually for 20 poor women residing in Westbury. The Laverton Institute, erected at a cost of over £4,000, by Abraham Laverton esq. M.P. is a substantial structure of red brick, with Bath stone dressings, with clock tower containing a clock lighted by gas; the Institute has divisions in which various societies hold their meetings, and a large room for lectures, public meetings, and musical entertainments: there is likewise at the rear a large flower legicle geographic flower meetings and large legicle flower meetings. boys' British school, capable of accommodating 100 scholars, with separate approach on the north-west side of the principal entrance: it occupies an elevated position on the descent of the hill, at the south-west end of the Bratton road, and was opened on the 11th of September, 1873. The trade of the town is chiefly in the manufacture of fancy woollen coating and meltons, employing about 700 hands; malting is likewise carried on, and there are two brick and malting is likewise carried on, and there are two brick and tile works. At Ham, close to the railway station, are iron works, developed in 1857: there are four blast furnaces, two of which are now at work, producing 500 tons weekly, and employing about 200 hands. On the Downs, a sheep fair is held annually on the first Tuesday in September, and pleasure fairs in the town on Easter Monday and Whit Monday. There was formerly a market, which has become obsolete. The chief landowners are Sir Massey Lopes bart. who is lord of the manor and hundred, R. L. H. Phipps, Sir Henry Lopes, Judge of Supreme Court of Judicature, and C. P. Phippa esqrs. The soil is green sand, subsoil, gault or dark clay. The parish contains 12,027 acres, principally pasture, arable and down land; rateable value, £34,714; the population of the parish, with Leigh and Dilton, in 1871 was 6,395; the limits of the parliamentary borough are co-extensive with the parish.

Sexton, William King.

Westbury Leigh is a large hamlet 1 mile south-west. A chapel of ease consisting at present of nave and chancel and base of a tower, has been (1880) built here and is now open for divine service under the Bishop's license: a south aisle and the completion of the tower will follow as soon as sufficient funds shall have been obtained; the building is placed in the centre of the hamlet, and in what will be an extensive churchyard when it shall have been consecrated. Here is a chapel for Baptists. Sir Massey Lopes bart. is lord of the manor.

Chalford is a small hamlet 1 mile south.

Dilton is a chapelry, in the parish of and annexed to the vicarage of Westbury, containing a few houses, about 2 miles south-west from the town of Westbury, and 3 northwest from Warminster. The chapel of St. Mary is a small building, and is believed to be very ancient; it has a small spire rising from one end, and stands at the bottom of a hill. The register dates from 1585. Wilkin's charity, of £58 yearly, is for clothing, and the Castle charity, of £15 yearly, for bread and clothing. C. P. Phipps esq. is lord of the manor.

DILTON MARSH, BRATTON, and HEYWOOD are ecclesisatical parishes formed out of Westbury, and will be found under their respective headings.

WILTON is a parliamentary borough, union town and parish, with a station on the South Western and Great parish, with a station on the South Western and Green Western railways, and is situate near the confluence of the rivers Nadder and Wylye, in the Southern division of the county, Branch and Dole hundred, Salisbury county court district, rural deanery of Wilton, archiestury county court district, rural deanery of Wilton, archiestury and diocese of Salisbury, 3 miles north-west from Salisbury and 86 from London. The town is supposed by Baxter to have been the Caer Guilo, or capital of the British prince Carollius, and subsequently an important seat of the West Saxons; it was subsequently an important seat of the West Saxons; it was certainly an important place previous to the Norman accession: in 871 King Alfred fought a battle against the Danes, who, although ultimately successful, aned for peace here, but in 1003 Wilton was partially devastated by Sweyn, King of Denmark: in 1143 it was taken possession of by King Stephen, who, however, was compelled to vacate it by the army of the Empress Matilda, by whom it was destroyed by fire; it was afterwards rebuilt, and, in 1579, visited by Queen Elizabeth: in 1603 it was for a time the residence of the court. Wilton was at a very senset period the seat of Queen Elizabeth: in 1603 it was for a time the residence of the court. Wilton was at a very remote period the seat of a monastery; Wulstan, Earl of Wiltshire, is said to have commenced this foundation by the erection of an oratory: thirty years after his death, Alburga, his widow, succeeded in raising this oratory into a priory. King Alfred, after defeating the Danes, erected a nunnery and transferred it to the sisters of the priory. Editha, daughter of Earl Godwin, and the virgin wife of Edward the Confessor, was educated here, and Maud, queen of Henry I. passed her early days between Romsey and this house. Wilton was the head of the diocese during the 10th and 11th centuries: the of the dicese during the 10th and 11th centuries: the episcopal see was transferred to Sarum by William the Conqueror, which caused the decline of Wilton: the borough first sent two members to Parliament in 23rd Edward [. but by the Reform Act the number was reduced to one: the but by the Reform Act the number was reduced to one: the parliamentary borough comprises twelve parishes besides Wilton, and parts of six other parishes: the town is governed by a high steward, mayor, recorder, aldermen and burgesses, of whom the mayor and recorder for the time being are magistrates. The late Lord Herbert of Les built in 1844 the church of SS. Mary and Nicholas in lieu of the old one; the expense, which was entirely defrayed by himself, is estimated to have been between £30,000 and £40,000: it is in the Romanesque style, consisting of chancel, with chancel aisles, nave and aisles: the north front is raised on a terrace approached by a flight of steps: the central entrance terrace approached by a flight of steps; the central entrance of this front is through a deeply recessed porch within a rich archway, above which is a large elaborate rose window; the campanile tower, 100 feet high, containing 6 bells, at the north-east angle, is connected with the building by a cloister, with elaborately carved open arches: beneath the communion table the floor is composed of Italian sgates and marble; the celling over this, as well as the chancel and altar-piece, is beautifully illuminated in blue and gold: the pulpit is composed of Caen stone, supported by 16 black marble pillars; the body of it is beautifully inlaid with mosaic work, brought from the church of Santa Maria Maggiore: the lessons are read from a lectern in front of the communion the lessons are read from a lectern in front of the communion table: at the opposite end is the gallery, beneath which is the screen, elegantly carved in stone: the fort is massive, of black and variegated Italian marble; the church contains a marble bust of Henry, 9th Earl of Pembroke, who held many offices of state under George II. The register dates from the year 1615. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value, with Bulbridge, Ditchampton and Netherhampton annexed, £527, with 22A. 2R. 29P. of glebe land and residence, in the gift of the Earl of Pembroke and held by the

Rev. Dacres Olivier M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. In the Town Hall hangs an extract from the will of R. Sumption esq. which is as follows: £4,000 in aid of the Free school; £1,000 for the better clothing and apprenticing the children; £1,000 as a marriage portion for poor young women, natives of the town, not to exceed £10 to each; also £2,000 towards the clothing and support of five poor meand five women above the age of 50, residents of the place for seven years previously. There are also many other charities in aid of the school, and for distribution. The Hostical College of the school of the school of the school. pital of St. John at Ditchampton, in the parish of Barconbe, founded by Hubert, Bishop of Sarum, in 1189, is for a prior, two poor men and two poor women; the prior is appointed by the Dean of Salisbury and the appointment is at present held by the Rev. Prehendary Passeon of Roch. Wilton is noted by the Rev. Prebendary Pearson, of Bath. Wilton is noted as the first place in England where carpeting was manas the first place in England where carpeting was made factured: Messrs Yates & Co. have a large factory here; is addition to Wilton carpets, the celebrated Axminster carpets are largely produced: this factory, which employs nearly 500 hands, is the only one in the town. The sheep fairs are the largest in the west of England: one is held on the 4th of May, for cattle and sheep, the other on September 12th, when between 90,000 and 100,000 are generally sold. At the Dissolution, Wilton Abbey was granted to Sir William Herbert, afterwards Earl of Pembroke, who, on the anciest site, commenced the erection of Wilton House, the present stately pile; the designs were by Holbein and Inigo Joses: here Sir Philip Sidney is said to have composed the "Arcadia": in this house, the seat of the Earl of Penhalter of the Penhalte broke, is an extensive and beautiful collection of paintings, several of them Vandykes, and ancient marble sculptur, and also many suits of armour, several being trophies from the battle of St. Quentin, in 1557, at which an Earl of Pembroke commanded the English: the river Nadder flows through the grounds and is crossed by an elegant bridge with an open Ionic colonnade: the park of 450 acres cotains some fine cedars of Lebanon. Part of the tithing of DITCHAMPTON belongs to the parish of Burcombe, but it lies contiguous to and forms part of Wilton, and is 2 miles east from Burcombe. Burden's Balle, which belongs to South Newton, is also given here. Bulberiog is another tithing, half a wile west. The Earl of Pembroke is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is allevial and clay; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and green crops. The area of the parish s 1,791 acres; rateable value, £6,869; and the population is 1871 was 1,871, and of the borough, 8,865.

ka takes its name from the shire town, or from he Dorsættas, and lies on the south coast of sg in the west, between Hampshire and Devons north-east it is bounded by Wiltshire, on the shire, on the south by the English Channel, on Devoushire and on the north-west by Somera shore line is the only natural boundary; for mething like a pyramid, with the head to the ling a spur on the south side, which forms the and. The breadth, from east to west, is 55 he length, from north to south, varies from 5 to area is 1,000 square miles, or 627,265 acres. population was 90,000; in 1801, 114,452; in ; in 1861 it was 188,789; in 1871, 195, 537, 5,616, females, 99,921. Dorsetshire lies between 1°5' north latitude, and between 1°48' and 3°7 shore is in two lines, a wide sweep tending y from Lyme Regis to the Bill or Beel of Portwestern part, which forms a deep bay within outland, called Weymouth Bay, and then runs it. Alban's Head and Durleston Head, having the Cove and Kimmeridge Bay. From Durleston tore runs north, along the east of the Isle of Purms Swanage Bay and Studland Bay, and then Poole Harbour.

Portland is a long narrow headland, running y into the sea, and joined to the mainland by a so long, called the Chesil—that is to say, the nk. The Isle of Purbeck is a large tract joined and on the west, but on the other side bounded Frome, Wareham and Pool Havens, and the laven is a large inlet in the south-east of Dorting many arms running up into the land; on ham, at the mouth of the Frome and Piddle, and Poole.

all of Dorset is about 30 inches in the year, but a the northern part. Daily measurements are us of rain-gauges at 13 places. In 1878 most aminster (401 inches), and least at the Verne cland (251 inches). The climate is mild, esget the coast.

Stour, Piddle and Frome. The Stour, comes serth, passes Gillingham, takes the Shreen ten the Cale from Wineanton, and the Lyd, or from the south, winds through Sturminster taking the Ewern to Blandford Forum, below which the Tarrant Bourne from the north, and the North the Tarrant Bourne from the course is then to Wimbe, where the Wim, or Allen, joins, and the river then south-easterly to Christchurch, in Hampshire; it is galle from Sturminster: it is more likely that the Wim, Allen, was the Alauna of the Romans, than that the Steur The Wim is the only considerable stream; it turns a paper mill. The Piddle, Puddle, or Trent, lies between the Stour and the Frome, and is a small stream running in a line with the Frome, about 4 miles off, and falling into Ware ham Harbour; it gives names to many villages. The Frome, anciently named the Varia, rises in the north-west, and flows to Dorchester, where the Churn Bourne comes in from Cerne or Churn Abbas; the South Winterbourn is another feeder: from Dorchester the Frome runs easterly to Wareham: it is in these western shires we meet with the class of streams called winterbournes, because they flow chiefly in the winter. Otherstreams are—the Wey, 5 miles long, falling into the sea at Weymouth; the Purbeck, 7 miles long, running from Corfe Castle to Swanage; the Fleet, flowing between the Chesil Bank and the main; the Breedy, or Bride. 7 miles long, falling into the sea near Bridport Harbour; the Brit, or Bride, rising at Beaminster, flowing through Bridport into the sea, and having the Asker and other small streams as affluents; the Char, falling in at Charmouth; and the Lyme at Lyme Regio. In the north-west parts the Parret, Ivel and their headsprings rise, but their course in Dorsetshire is short. Near Broadway is a sulphureous spring named Nottington Spa.

The land is hilly, but well watered. The vale of Blackmore, or that of the Frome and Piddle, is a fruitful grazing ground, nearly 20 miles long and 14 broad; on the Downs sheep are fed. The soils are of many kinds, from rich loam to hard stone. The chalk formation covers the greater part of the shire, the North Downs beginning at Cranbourne and running to Beaminster, and the South Downs running from Beaminster to Melcombe and Swanage. Between these are the upper formation of plastic, potters' and pipe clay, and sand called the "Poole Trough." Here a light earthy coal is found, like Bovey coal; in the south, chalk, marl, green-sand, weald clay and iron-sand are found, and in Purbeck and Portland the colite formations: westward of Weymouth Bay the colites form a "saddle," and are repeated: in the north the green-sand is found. Dorsetshire yields Portland stone, Purbeck marble, lime, founders' sand, iron-sand, copperas, alum, pottery clay, pipeclay, fire-bricks, bituminous shales, salt, sheep and cattle, wool, corn, hay, potatoes and cider. It is best known for its Dorset, Portland and South Down sheep: it has also a small breed of ponies. The dairy is much looked to, a large proportion of the land is in pasture and the butter and cheese of Dorsetshire are much esteemed in the London market. In Cranborne Chase and in Sellwood, to the north of Shaftesbury, some timber is grown; but most of the woods have been cleared.

Lime, sea-weed and fish are to be had in most parts for manures, and for meadows the catchwater plan is used. Barley is more grown than wheat; hemp and flax are likewise grown.

The manufactures are sail-cloth, sacking, nets, shoemakers' thread, paper, silk and agricultural implements, carried on at Bridport, Beaminater, Blandford, Bourton Gillingham, Sherborne, Wimborne and Dorchester; with malting and brewing. The potteries are of some importance. In some of the large towns are iron foundries. Ships and yachts are built at Poole and Bridport. The chief fisheries are those of mackerel; oyster beds are likewise kept up. In the rivers, salmon, trout, jack and eels are caught. The fishing towns are Poole, Swanage, Lulworth Weymouth, Bridport and Lyme.

The inport trade is in the supply of coals, timber and wine, with some Newfoundland trade. The exports are wine, with some Newfoundland trade. The exports are Purbeck and Portland stone, clay, upwards of sixty thousand tons of which are annually sent to the potteries, Portland cement, bricks, sheep, wool, butter, poultry, cheese, ale, cider and mackerel.

The inhabitants on the coast depend on the fisheries, quarries, and visitors to the watering places. These latter are Weymouth, Swansge, Lyme Regis and Parkstone. The havens are Poole, Warcham, Swanage, Weymouth, Bridport, Lyme and Studland Bay; but Lyme has much fallen off. A breakwater has been made in Portland Bay, so as to form a great harbour of refuge over against Cherbourg; it is one wills and three quarters long; the works were executed by mile and three quarters long: the works were executed by a large convict establishment.

The railways are the Southampton and Dorchester, belonging to the South Western Company; the Somerset and Dorset from Burnham, Somerset, to Wimborne and Poole, assing through Stalbridge, Sturminster-Newton and Bland-ord. The London and South Western Extension to Exeter passing through Stalbridge, Sturminster-Newton and Blandord. The London and South Western Extension to Exeter and North Devon have stations at Gillingham and Sherborne, and skirts the north of the county. The Dorsetshire line enters from Ringwood, in Hampshire, and passes Wimborne (with a branch to Poole and Bournemouth), Wareham, Wool and Moreton to Dorchester, thence to Weymouth and Portland, with a short line to Abbotshury from Weymouth. The Great Western Company have a branch from Maiden members of Parliament are returned for Dorsetshire, one for Dorchester, two for Weymouth, one for Poole, one each for Shaftesbury, Wareham and Bridport, which are all boroughs. Dorchester and Poole formerly returned two members each, but the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," reduced the number to one. Lyme Regis was disfranchised by the "Representation of the People (Scotland) Act, 1868." The shire is in the western circuit. The town of Poole is a county of itself. Quarter sessions are held at Dorchester and Poole. Dorsetshire forms nine petty sessional divisions—Blandford (North and South), Bridport, Cerne. Dorchester, Shaftesbury, Sherborne and Sturminster. semional divisions—Blandford (North and South), Bridport, Cerne, Dorchester, Shaftesbury, Sherborne and Sturminster. The Poor-law Unions are twelve—Beaminster, Blandford, Bridport, Cerne, Dorchester, Poole, Shaftesbury, Sherborne, Sturminster, Wareham and Purbeck, Weymouth and Wimborne.

There are 33 Hundreds and 21 Liberties, hesides the county of Poole.

The market-towns are Dorchester, Blandford, Shesborse, Shaftesbury, Wimborne, Poole, Wareham, Weymouth, Bridport, Beaminster, Lyme, Stalbridge, Cerne Abbs, and Sturminster; Gillingham has declined. Yeovil, Arminster, Crewkerne, Chard, Milborne Port and Wincanton, are market towns in the bordering shires.

are market towns in the bordering shires.

Dorsetshire is an archdeaconry, in the diocese of Salisbury and province of Canterbury, and forms the rural deacates of Bridport, four portions; Dorchester, three portions; Pimperne, two portions; Shaftesbury, four portions; and Whitchurch, four portions. It had formerly amany rich and old abbeys of Benedictines and Cistercians; among those were Shaftesbury, Sherborne, Cerne, Abboshury, Bindon, Cranborne, Horton and Mitton; likewise priories at Dorchester, Bridport, Wareham, Loders, Frampias and Spetisbury. Sherborne was the see of a bishop from 705 to 1075. There are still some Catholic numeries and chapels, well endowed by the wealthy members of that communications. well endowed by the wealthy members of that communica-

Dorsetshire seems to have been taken from the Britos by the Belgian Durotriges, likewise called Morni, which words are said to mean "dwellers by the sea." Of the Britons and Belgians there seem to be many remain-Agglestone and Puckstone, near Studiand, in the late of Purbeck; Portisham Cromlech, called Hellstone, a circle of stones near Winterborne St. Martin; another near Porwell, and another at Little Breedy; perhaps Badbury Rings and Maumbury belong to this period.

Under the Romans it was a part of Britannia Prims, and they had many settlements, as Durnovaria (Dorchester).

Morinio (Wareham), Vindio Gladia (Wimborne), Canca Arista (Charmouth), Londinis (Lyme Regis), Bolcianio (Poole), and Clavinio (Weymouth). Other settlements were—Alcester, Stoborough, Charborough, Chelborough, Gainsborough, Bedcister, Horebester, Hogchester. A great road, named by the English the Ikening or Ikenield way (Via Iceniana), comes in by Woodyates, passes through Durnovaria, and goes to the west. At Durnovaria, the most famous remain is the amphitheatre. The part of Ikening way, near Dorchester, called Ackling Dike, is in fair preservation.

On the downs and cliffs are many camps and barrows, British, Belgian, Roman or English; among these are Badbury and Maumbury, those on the Stour between Sturminster and Bradford, Weatherbury, Eggardon, Loosebarrow, Rowbarrow, Shaftesbury, Melbury, Hazelbury, Spettisbury, Chalbury, Abbotsbury, Netherbury, Symondsbury, Hamilton Hill, Worbarrow, Woolbarrow, Churchbarrow, Flowersbarrow, Wardstonebarrow, Blackbarrow, Woodbury, Boltonbarrow, Banbury, Westbury, Figbury, Lushbarrow, Conquerbarrow, Laurencebarrow, Churchbarrow, Seabarrow, Poundbury, Kaspbarrow, Bullbarrow, Dodsbary, Broadfordbarrow, Barrow Hill, Henbury, Strawbarrow, Kingbarrow, Ballbarrow, Greatbarrow, Egertonbarrow, Boorsbarrow, Longbarrow, Stablebarrow, Powbarrow, Bridwellbarrow, Mawerbury, Buzbury, Eastbury and Westbury, near Tarrant Gunville, Thorncombe, Bealon, Mowlamsbarrow, Tadnollbarrow, Lordsbarrow, Endbarrow, Yonbarrow, Carnebarrow, Stonebarrow, Swyrsebarrow, Cholbury, Hakebury, Swan Knoll, Round Rudbarrow, Konsarrow, Educatorow, Swyrsebarrow, Cennebarrow, Stonebarrow, Swyrsebarrow, Cholbury, Hakebury, Swan Knoll, Round Pound, Five Meersbarrow, and Mawerbury. Many tesselated pavements, also pottery and Roman coins, have been found. The whole number of Roman camps has been reckoned at 25.

On the shore near Wareham, Portland, and Charmouth, many fights took place with the Danish rovers. In the Parliamentary War the gentry took part with the king, and held out in many sieges and fights, in which their castles were ruined; the townsmen sided with the Parliament; but the country people held aloof from both King and Parliament, and formed companies of "clubmen-" to keep them off. keep them off.

The objects of interest are many: the fossils of the Isles of Purbeck and Portland and of Lyme Regis: the shore scenery, Lulworth Cove, and Chesil Bank (the curious spit which joins the Isle of Portland to the main); the amphitheatre at Dorchester; Agglestone, Puckstone, Hellstone, Badbury Rings, Maumbury; the pits on Bladen Heath; the earthworks surrounding Wareham; the figure on the Giant's Hill near Cerne, which is an ancient figure out in outline on the chalk 180 feet long; at Osmington is a similar figure of a horse and rider covering an acre of ground, representing George III. on horseback; the churches at Shaftesbury, Sherborne, and Wimborne; and the remains of the abbeys and priories.

The old Dorset County Pauper Lunatic Asylum is situated at Forston, 21 miles north-west from Charminster : it furat Forston, 22 miles north-west from Charminster: it Iuraishes accommodation for 150 patients: it was formerly the seat of the late Francis John Browne, who gave it to the county for this purpose, and was opened in 1832; it has been enlarged by the crection of additional wings; it now forms an extensive range of buildings, with grounds and orchard adjoining. The New County Asylum, very extensive and well adjoining. The New County Asylum, very extensive and went suited for the purpose, has been erected one mile from the old asylum; it was opened in 1864 and is capable of accommodating 320 patients; and it cost, including 56 acres of land, about £44,000; private patients are received at a charge varying from 10s. to 14s. weekly. J. Gustavus Symes, medical superintendent; W. H. Gillespie, assistant medical officer; H. G. Peacock, assistant medical officer at Forston; Rev. W. Johnson, chaplain; John Brown, elerk.

The Dorset County Hospital, Dorchester, was built in 1841, in the Tudor style, and a new wing added in 1866: at present it furnishes accommodation for 60 in-door patients, but possesses ample room for a larger number. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, E.G. patron; the Right Hon. Lord Digby, president; Herbert Williams, esq. treasurer; R. Pearce and J. M. Lush, esqrs. anditors; J. R. Tooze, esq. and J. F. THE GEOLOGY OF DORSETSHIRE.

SOME portions of Dorsetshire—more especially the coast—offer such unrivalled opportunities for geological study, that they early attracted the attention of writers on that that they early attracted the attention of writers on that science. The papers by Berger, Cumberland, De la Beche, Webster, Lyell, Buckland, Fitton, Clarke, and Thomson, published some forty years ago in the "Transactions &c. of the Geological Society," may still be usefully referred to. Later on, in the "Journal" of the same society, we have the results of the work of the Revs. P. B. Brodie, Dennis, Fisher and Blake, Dr. Falcon r. Professors Phillins and Ruckman and on, in the "ournal" of the same society, we have the results of the work of the Revs. P. B. Brodle, Dennis, Fisher and Blake, Dr. Falcon r. Professors Phillips and Buckman, and Mesers. Day, Whitaker, Hulke and Hudleston.

The maps and sections of the Government Geological Survey, executed about 1850 by Mr. H. W. Bristow, are simply indispensable to every student of the rocks.

The Dorset Natural History and Antiquarian Held Club has lately published the first two volumes of its "Transactions," edited by Professor Buckman, and containing valuable geological papers by Messrs. Mansell-Pleydell, Thomas Davidson, Rev. H. H. Wood, S. Buckman, and the Editor. Hutchin's "History of Dorset'" may be consulted with advantage, and for the Weymouth district Mr. Damon's little work is useful; in the "Proceedings of the Geologists' Association of London" we find papers by Mr. J. S. Gardner on the "Wealden in Swanage Bay," and by Mr. J. S. Gardner on the "Bocene Strata;" for numerous other facts we are indebted to scattered notices in the "Geological Magasine."

GENERAL STRUCTURE OF THE COUNTY .- The surface of Dorsetshire may be divided into four regions, which owe their characteristics to the rocks of which they are composed.

(1). In the north, north-west and west we have the Vale country, consisting of much clay land formed of lisseic and oolitic strata and extending to the foot of the chalk bills; this is a fertile region and is one of the many parts of our Isle for which the term "Garden of England" has been claimed.

(2). The chalk forms a tract of country in the centre of the county, and east of it we have (3) sands (with some clay beds) of Tertiary age, forming a rather barren region. Lastly (4), a band of colitic and cretaceous rocks forms a fringe along the coast, producing beautiful scenery and of high geological interest.

In the main the beds of rock have an inclination, or dip, towards the south-east; it results from this, that the oldest or lowest rocks are those which rise to the surface, or crop out, on the west and north-west of the county. In our out, on the west and north-west of the county. In our description of the strata we shall commence with these older strata and gradually advance eastwards, rising in the geological series to newer and newer formations.

The heights of a few points above sea level are Pillesdon The neights of a few points above sea level are Phiesdon Pen, 934 feet; Lewesdon Pen, 937 feet; Lyme Regis Guildhall, 28 feet; Charmouth Church, 92 feet; Stanton St. Gabriel Church, 411 feet; Chideock Church, 102 feet; Bridport Market House, 51 feet; Winterborne Church, 923 feet; Dorchester Church, 224 feet; Wareham Old Church, 38 feet; Poole Guildhall, 13 feet; these are taken from the "Abstract of the Levelling by the Ordnance from the "Abstract of the Levelling by the Ordnance Survey."

THE RHAETIC BEDS.—Until 1860 these beds were classed with the Lias by English geologists, but their fossils on being closely examined proved to be of different species to those of the Lias, a fact which led to the separation of these Rhaetic deposits from the great mass of the Lias above. They consist of greenish mari, black shales and compact whitish limestones, the latter known as the "White Lias;" the total thickness is only about 100 feet. These beds just enter the country near Lyme Regis; their fossile beds just enter the county near Lyme Regis; their fossils include the shells Avicula contorta and Pecter Valoniensis, while in the black shales there are one or two sandy layers containing such numbers of scales and bones of fishes and saurians as to be entitled "bone-beds." THE LIAS.—This well-known formation is magnificently exposed at Lyme Regis, and extends eastwards along the coast past Charmouth and Scatown to Burton Bradstock. coast past Charmouth and Seatown to Burton Bradstock. The middle and upper beds of this grand coast section have been well described by Mr. Day, but of the Lower Lias no detailed account has yet been made public. The Lower Lias contains in its lower part, where it surmounts the Rhaetic beds, many layers of limestone and these yield the fine specimens of saurians and fishes for which Lyme Regis has always been noted; the fine skeletons of Ichthyosaurus and Pleriosaurus extracted by Miss Mary Anning, Mr. J. W.

Marder and Mr. Hawkins, are now deposited in our national marter and mr. Hawkins, are now depoted in our massar museums; they vary in length when full grown from 9 to 25 feet and are of types unlike any now living; they probably inhabited shallow sees and estuaries, preying then you fishes, as we may judge from the numerous remains, scales &c. of the latter found in and near the skeletoss of the great saurians. The upper portion of the Lower Lias is composed of marks and clays, and the thickness of this division is about 700 feet; it extends eastwards along the valley of the Char, past Marshwood to Piliesdon and Bettiscombe. The most characteristic fossils are the Ammonites, different The most characteristic fossils are the Ambonics, district species of which characterise different beds, forming "mass" in the following order from below upwards:—(1), Amsonites planorbis; (2), angulatus; (3), Bucklandi; (4), Turneri; (5), obtusus; (6), oxynotus; (7), raricostatus. The fossil fishes, for which Lyme Regis is famou, are believed to occur chiefly in the dark marks of the Bucklandi.

and Turneri beds.

A small oyster, Ostrea liassica, occurs in great numbers just at the junction of the Lower Lins with the Rhetic

Reds.

Middle Lias.—This division is, according to Mr. Day, thicker on the coast of Dorset than anywhere else in Eagland, as he estimates it at 500 feet. The lower part is marly, the upper sandy, and of the well-known irony linestone, which, under the name of maristone, usually forms the up of the Middle Lias there is only a very imperfect representative. The characteristic ammonites are A. Jameses tive. The characteristic ammonites are A. Jamessi, Henleyi, margaritatus, and spinatus. Fine sections are exposed at Black Ven, Stonebarrow Hill, Westhay Cliff, Golden Cap, Down Cliffs &c. The fossils lie very much in particular beds, and unless these are found the charer of collecting good specimens is not great; in the ledges of the lower part of the beach at Golden Cap immense numbers of Belemsnites occur; a beautiful star-fish, Ophisicians Egertoni, is common at the base of a thick bed of ambitone about half way up Golden Cap and Down Cliffs. Ialand the Middle Lias extends past Bridport to Netherbury, and thence westwards by Hawkchurch into Devon.

Upper Lias.—This division includes 90 feet of clays sur-thence westwards by Hawkchurch into Devon. Upper Lias.—This division includes 90 feet of clays armounted by sands whose exact position in the geological series is rather doubtful; they are above 100 feet in thickness, and were mapped by the Geological Survey as belonging to the Upper Lias, but it now seems probable that they belong in part or altogether to the Inferior Colite; it will be best perhaps to adopt the views of Professor Ramssy and consider them, like the Rhastic beds, to be beds of passer linking together the great liassic and colitic formations; we can trace these sands east of Bridmort mat Milton in the contract of t we can trace these sands east of Bridport, pest Milton to Beaminster and Burstock, and thence curving road by Crewkerne and Yeovil to Nether Compton. The femils include Rhynchonella cynocephala, Ammonites Jurenis,

A. aalensis, &c.

THE OOLITE.—Dorsetshire offers a fine opportunity for the study of the beds of this epoch; they occur in two distinct sets, vis. in the north-west of the county, and as a nurrow tract along the south coast.

The Inferior Oolite can be traced from Oborne through The Inferior Oolite can be traced from Oborne through Bradford Abbas to Berwick, and thence by Wayford and Beaminster to Burton Bradstock; at the latter point it consists of ferruginous limestones, but further north, at Powerstock and at Ham Hill, near Sherborne, we get thick bein of shelly colite, which yield an excellent building stone: one stratum at Bradford Abbas, about three feet thick, is so charged with ammonities as to be called the Cephalopots Bed, but Professor Buckman has lately shown that it does not correspond with the bed of the same name in the Cottenot correspond with the bed of the same name in the Cottewold Hills, with which it had been confounded, but that its true position is at least 100 feet higher in the strate. The fossils of the Inferior Colite of this district include Amas-tossils of the Inferior Oolite of this district include Amerites Humphricaianus, A.Parkinsoni, Terebraula Philipsii, several species of Astarte, Trigonia, &c.; the sol is of a reddish tinge and brashy.

The Fuller's Earth.—This division consists of bise set yellow murls and clays about 400 feet thick, divided about the middle by a bed of rubbly limestone, called the fuller's Earth Rock, which is largely quarried for lime-bursing; this bed only occurs in the northern or vale portion of the county. We can trace the Fuller's Earth running can's Sherborne in a long narrow atrin south-west to China Sherborne in a long narrow strip south-west to Edia Wood; after being interrupted by faults it spreads wish between Halstock and South Perrott, and then curre real-by Misterton, and runs north of Beaminster to Tolic Per corum, whence it passes southwards, although interrupted of the Isle of Portland. In North Dorset the Kimmeridge by several faults, until it forms the coast for four or five Clay has an outcrop four miles wide at Gillingham and miles east of Burton Bradstock. The Fuller's Earth is Motcombe, and thence passes southwards by West Orchard, chiefly under pasturage: it does not contain many fossils, but a small oyster, Ostrea acuminata, is pretty common. The Great Colite, which, further north, near Bath, furnishes such excellent stone, does not occur in Dorsetsbire, being found to thin out and disappear as it is followed southwards.

The Forest Marble.—The beds of this name consist of The Forest Martie.—Inc Deut of this name consist of clays containing layers of thin fissile limestones, altogether 450 feet thick; it is possible, however, that the lower portion may represent the Great Colite of Gloucestershire. The Forest Marble forms a poor, wet soil, mostly in pasture; we can trace it between Stalbridge Park and Holt Hill, again between Sherborne Park and Lillington, and at Melbury Wood and West Chelborough; in the southern region it extends from Radipole to Langton Herring, and also bury Wood and West Chelborough; in the southern region it extends from Radipole to Langton Herring, and also along the valley of the Bredy. The limestone layers are quarried for flagstones, and at Brotherhampton near Bridport, are burnt into lime; at Long Burton near Sherborne, he limestone has been polished for chimney pieces, and is called "Yeovil Marble." Of the fossils which occur such as Terebratula maxillata, Rhynchonella concinna, &c. hardly any are peculiar to this formation.

Cornbrash.—This name implies a rock breaking up, under the influence of the weather, into small irregular fragments, producing a "brashy" soil on which corn grows well: it is a bed of cream-coloured limestone, varying in well: it is a bed of cream-coloured limestone, varying in Dorset, from 20 to 40 feet in thickness, and everywhere present in its proper position beneath the Oxford Clay, not present in its proper position sensati the Oxford Clay, not only in this county but right across England to Yorkshire. Entering on the north, at Stalbridge, it forms a band halfa-mile wide, through Stourton Caundle to Bishop's Caundle: here its displaced by a fault, and we find it again between Haydon and Long Burton, and again round Yetminster, Ryme, Closeworth and Melbury: in the coast tract it occurs at Puncknowl, and between Radipole and New Children Charles and Company of the feedile, no not in the coast tract. West Chickerel. The fossils are not in fine condition, but the Rev. H. H. Wood has obtained about 180 species from the neighbourhood of Closeworth, including Avicula echinata, Ammonites Herveyi &c.; and Mr. Darell Stephens here found a great rarity—the skull of a crocodile—Steneo-saurus Stephani. A remarkable point about the fossils is, that many of them are Interior Colite species, which are wanting in the intermediate beds, thus giving an example of a recurrent fauna, which is of great interest. According to Professor Buckman, the Cornbrash contains more phosphate of lime than the other Colitic strata, a fact which phate of lime than the other Collitic strats, a fact which would account for its greater fertility.

The Oxford Clay.—This is a very thick bed of bluish clay, containing rounded masses (septaria) of limestone, called pudding stones, which have been cut and polished at Weymouth, Melbury &c. A common fossil is a large broad oyster, called Gryphæa dilatata. The Oxford Clay forms the low ground on each side of the river Lidden, between Stalbridge and Marnhull, and thence extends in a strip two or three miles wide by Lidlinch, Pulham and Holnest to Chetnole; this is its westward termination, but on the south we find it again in the upner part of the Bredy Valley, and we find it again in the upper part of the Bredy Valley, and also between Melcombe Regis and East Fleet: its thickness is perhaps 700 feet: being heavy, and difficult to cultivate, the land is mostly in permanent pasture. The hard bed, found elsewhere at the base of the Oxford Clay, and known as the Kellaway's Rock, has not been noted in Dor-

Coral Rag.—In North Dorset we see, above the Oxford Clay, some beds of colitic and rubbly limestone, associated Clay, some beds of collide and rubbly limestone, associated at the top and bottom with sands and marls, altogether about 100 feet thick. They stretch from Silton, by Stower, Marnhull, Sturminster Newton, Fifehead Neville, Haselbury, Whence they are overlapped by the Cretaceous Rocks. There is a fine section of the strate shown by the Sturminster will are cutting and the lower hade vield a good minster railway cutting, and the lower beds yield a good collic building-stone at Marnhull and Todbere.

At Weymouth the Coral Rag is finely exposed on the coast, and stretches across to Wyke Regis: it also runs as coast, and stretches across to Wyke Regis: it also runs as a long narrow band from Ringstead Bay and Radeliff Point, by Jordon Hill and Broadway, to Abbotsbury. At the latter place is a thick local deposit of iron ore (hydrated peroxide).

The characteristic fossils are spines of a see-urchim—Cidaris florigemma, Trigonia clavellata, Ammonites cordatus &c.; corals are frequent in Ringstead Bay only.

Kimmeridge Clay.—This formation takes its name from a little Dorsetahire village on the south-west side of the lele of the same are can the Coral Ray in a little Dorsetabire village on the south-west side of the Isle of Purbeck; beds of the same age cap the Coral Rag in Ringstead Bay and extend thence westwards by Upway Street to Portisham; they also occur is the northern part lower part as the Rustings Beds, and the upper division

Animorus Clay.—Anis formation takes its name from probably estuarine, conditions:

Motcombe, and thence passes southwards by West Orchard, Hammoon and Shilling Oksford to Melcombe Park. South of Weymouth, about 20 feet of sandy clays and grits are seen, containing Ostrea deltoidea, Trigonia Meriani &c.; these are the Passage Beds of Mr. Blake; in Ringstead Bay about 400 feet of blue sandy clays, with nodular limestone concretions, constitutes the Lover Kimmeridge; the stone concretions, constitutes the Lower Kimmeridge; the common shells are, Exogyra virgula, Thracia depressa, Ammonites biplex &c. The Upper Kimmeridge beds are 650 feet thick in Kimmeridge Bay, and consist of bituminous shales and cement-stones; these contain many fossils, as Discina latissima, Cardium striatulum &c. and all the large bones of saurians, which have been described by Professor Owen, Mr. Hulke and others, have come from this division; one paddle of a Pilosaurus, now in the Dorchester Museum, measures 6 feet 9 inches in length. the Dorchester Museum, measures 6 feet 9 inches in length. Some of the shales are so bituminous as to be used in the neighbourhood instead of coal, when the latter substance is dear; attempts, too, have been made to distil mineral oils, and make alum and gas from these shales, but not, hitherto, with any great success. There is a good deal, too, of the yellow mineral called iron pyrites, and the spontaneous decomposition of this substance at Ringstead Bay, in 1826, produced so much heat as to inflame the shales, which continued to smoulder for several years. From the same cause similar ignitions have occurred in the lias beds at Charmouth, usually after heavy rains, or when the sea has dashed over the cliffs.

The Portland Beds are called after the isle, or rather peninsula, of that name: they consist of 70 feet of grey and yellow sands, surmounted by an equal thickness of shelly and colitic limestone containing nodules and bands of chert, an impure variety of fiint: besides the locality from which they take their name, we find these beds in the Isle of Purbeck, circling round from St. Alban's Head by West Hill to Gad Cliff: they fringe the coast from Mewp's Bay to Durdle Door, and are also traceable between Osmington and Portisham: they are not visible in North Dorset, being overlapped and concealed by cretaceous strata, but they peep out again at Tisbury, in Wiltshire. The upper limestone bands yield some of the best building stone in England: the roach bed lies near the top; it is she lly and not suitable for fine work: the best stone is that of the whit bed, lower down, though it is not so thick. St. Paul's Cathedral and down, though it is not so thick. St. Paul's Cathedral and many of the churches and other public buildings of London, especially those erected in the reign of Queen Anne, are built of Portland colite.

The feedls mostly occur as casts; Cerithium Portlandi-cum (the "Portland screw"), Ammonites giganteus and Cardium dissimils may be mentioned; yellow crystals of sulphate of barytes are not uncommon.

The Purbeck Beds.—These consist of limestones, clays and marls, altogether 300 feet thick: in the Isle of Purbeck they extend from Swanage to Worth Matravers, and thence in a narrow band through Kingston to Worbarrow Bay: as Bay and Man-of-War Cove: in the Weymouth district they cap the Isle of Portland on the south, and are found on the north between Osmington and Poxwell, and west of Upway. north between Osmington and Poxwell, and west of Upway. In 1850 Professor B. Forbes divided the Purbecks into Lower, Middle and Upper: the Lower Purbeck contains "Dirt Beds," which are the remains of old land surfaces composed of vegetable soil and containing stumps of trees named Mantellia, which are allied to the living Cycads: in the Middle Purbecks we have "Cinder Beds," composed of the comp of vast masses of systems: the upper beds are freshwater lime-stones full of Paludina and other freshwater shells: these limestones were formerly polished and used, under the name of "Purbeck Marble," to make the slender shafts in Gothic churches. Remains of insects are frequent in the Purbecks, churches. Remains of insects are frequent in the Furbecks, and Cyprides (small freshwater crustaceans) are also very abundant. In 1854 Mr. W. R. Brodie found remains of small mammals in the Middle Purbecks, at Duriston Bay, and in 1856 the energetic researches of Mr. S. H. Beckles exhumed fragments (chiefly lower jaws) of 25 species from the same bed in the suburbs of Swanage. These have been described by Professor Owen as marsupials of small size, resembling the Kangaroo Rat of Australia.

The Purbeck strata close the great Jurassic series, as the Lias and Oolites are termed when considered as a whole: the nature of the sediment and the fossils they contain show them all to be of marine origin until we come to the very top, where in the Purbeck Beds we have evidence of freshwater, as the Weald Clay: they occupy the whole recess of Swanage Bay and extend due west to Worbarrow Bay, which is also excavated in them: their dip is due north at a high angle: they thin westwards in a remarkable manner from 1,000 feet at Swanage Bay to 725 at Worbarrow Bay, 660 at Mewp's Bay, 462 at Lulworth Cove and 172 at Man-of-War Cove: inland they can be traced from the north side of East Cover. Institutiney can be fraced from the north side of East Chaldon to Osmington. In Swanage Bay bones of two gigantic reptiles, the Iguanodon and Megalosaurus, have been found, and here, too, Mr. Beckles has found gigantic footprints, 15 inches long, of these or some other huge monsters.

The Punfield Series was named by Professor Judd from the place of that name, on the north side of Swanage Bay. Here we have about 200 feet of laminated shales and sands containing bands of limestone and ironstone: these contain brackish water and marine fossils, showing a depression of the Wealden area which admitted the waters of the open sea.

The Lower Greensand consists of grey clays and sands about 60 feet thick, resting on the Punfield bed, and containing Exogyra sinuata &c.

CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—Of the lowest division of this series—the Gault—there is a poor representative seen in Punfield Cove: it is a dark sandy elay with few fossils, and is about 40 feet thick: it has been traced westwards to Lyme Regis, where, at Black Ven, it rests upon the Lias. On the west side of Shaftesbury the Gault again crops out: here it is thicker and assumes its normal character of a blue micaceous clay.

The Upper Greensand varies from 100 to 200 feet in thickness: it is a yellowish-brown sand, containing beds of sandstone and layers of chert, and near the base is speckled green by silicate of iron: it runs everywhere at the base of the chalk hills, except where cut off by faults; from Pun-field it passes westwards through East Chaldon, Abbotsbury Castle and Askerswell to Cheddington, then curves north-east by Maiden Newton, Evershot, Melcombe, Bingham and east by Maiden Newton, Evershot, Meicombe, Bingiam and Sutton Waldron to Shaftesbury, east of which town it has a broad outerop reaching to Berwick St. John; generally its outcrop is less than half a mile wide. Many outlying patches of the Upper Greensand form the capping of the hills in West Dorset; among these are Eype Down, Golden Cap, Stonebarrow Hill, Haddon Hill, Lewsdon Hill, Pillesdon Pen, Conic Castle, Thorncomb &c. The great unconformity of the Cretaceous series to the underlying strata is well shown by this overlap of the Upper Greensand upon well shown by this overlap of the Upper Greensand upon bed after bed of the lower rocks. The Upper Greensand is an excellent water-bearing stratum, the rain which has perco-lated through the chalk being arrested by the clayey base of the sands: hence springs issue all along its outcrop, and the sites of villages and towns have been determined by it. Near Shaftesbury a bed of sandstone is quarried for building purposes. Possils are not numerous, but a branching sponge and the shells Pecten asper, P. quadricostatus &c. show the strata to be of marine origin.

The Chalk.—All the ordinary sub-divisions are recognisable in Dorsetshire. First we have the Chalk Marl, nasaue in Dorsetsuire. First we have the Chaik Mari, about 60 feet thick, greyer than ordinary chalk and containing a slight admixture of clay; at its base is a bed about 18 inches thick, containing phosphatic nodules and many fossils; this layer is known as the Chloritic Mari: next comes the Lower Chaik, or chalk-without-flints, from 50 to 150 feet thick; its top is the chalk-rock, a hard thin band of cream-coloured chaik: the Upper Chaik, or chalk-with-flints, is 600 feet thick on the east of Dorset, but it thins westward.

As a whole the Chalk forms a broad band 10 miles in width, extending from Cranborne and Cranborne Chase to the south-west, past Blandford, Sturminster Marshall, Bere Regis, Piddletown, Hilton, Cerne Abbas and Dorchester. The Downs above Beaminster are separated from the main mass, and other outliers occur further west near Mosterton, Cricket St. Thomas &c.; along all the line now mentioned the dip is gentle and to the south-east.

On the south coast the Chalk has been upheaved so as to stand nearly vertically from Durdle Cove by Bindon Hill, Purbeck Down, and above Corfe Castle to Ballard Down, where the Foreland marks its present termination, although originally it stretched right across to the Needles in the Isle of Wight.

In Dorset the chalk presents its usual characteristics—high, bare and rounded hills covered with short herbage, but possessing little or no soil, dry valleys and few trees. On the southern slope of the Down at Owermoigne, facing Weymouth, a gigantic figure of George III. on horseback, Weynouth, a gigante in girle of reorge 11. On novelesca, 174 feet in height, has been made by cutting away the turf; near Cerne there is a similar figure of a giant holding a club. More than half a million sheep still feed on the Dorset Downs, but a good deal of the land has of late years been brought under plough. The chalk may be examined in many pits where it is quarried for lime-burning: the flints are used for road-mending. The feedle of the Lower Chalk include the brachloped shell, Rhynchenella Cuvieri, and several species of Inoceramus; in the Upper Chalk we find the rounded bodies of many sea-urchins, with Spondylus spinosus, Rhynchonella octoplicata, fish-teeth &c. The chemical composition of chalk is nearly pure carbonate of lime, and the microscope shows it to be composed in large part of the shells of microscopic animals, called foraminifers, belonging to the lowest scale of animal life.

Land-slips.—Along the Dorset coast, near Lyme Regis, the Chalk and Upper Greensand rest on Rhaetic and Lineic clays, and dip slightly towards the sea, while numerous springs issue at the junction of the sands and clays. Here are all the conditions favourable to the production of landare an the conditions revolutable to the production of mul-alips, and they frequently occur and are sometimes of great magnitude. In 1839, about 22 acres of land at Bindon slipped down towards the sea, producing a chasm 1,000 yards in length by 300 in breadth: a model illustrating this may be seen in the Jermyn Street Museum, London. TERTIARY EPOCH: THE ROCKNE FORMATION.—The Rocene beds of Dorset rest on an eroded surface of chalk.

They occur in the eastern portion of the county, and form part of the "Hampshire Basin," which includes the strata of the same age in the Isle of Wight.

Woolwick and Reading Beds.—These consist of sands, pebble-beds and clays, with sometimes a layer of green-coated flints at the base where they rest on the chalk. They form a narrow band from the south side of Studiand Bay through Lulworth, Wool, Winfrith, Warmwell, Piddletown Heath, Bloxworth, Corfe Mullen and Edmondsham, their outcrop being from balf-a-mile to a mile wide, and it can be often traced by the oak trees which grow well on this formation. The old name for this division was the "Plastic formation. Clay," and red and mottled clays are of frequent occurrence; at Crandle Common, near Cranborne, coarse pottery is made from a bed of this kind; fossils are wanting except that leaves are found in a pale-grey sandy pipe-clay mar Rest Bloxworth.

Outliers of the Reading Beds occur on the chalk at Biscombe Down, and on Black Down shove Portisham, &c. On Affpuddle Heath and Piddletown Heath, east of Dorchester, large natural pits occur, like inverted coses, measuring from 30 to 100 feet in diameter; these have been formed by the removal of the underlying chalk by water changed with carbonic acid gas, the upper sands &c. have then felling in then fallen in.

The London Clay (or Bognor Beds) forms a similar sur-face feature to the Reading Beds, which it closely accompanies along the line just noted; its outcrop between Wimborse Minster and Fordingbridge is rather wider, occupying from one to two miles at the surface: it consists of bro clays containing irony concretions and flint pebbles.

The Lower Bagshot Beds form all the land round Pools

Harbour, reaching westwards through Wareham and Moston to Woodsford, and stretching east and north-east across the boundary of the county by Kingston and Woolbridge; they are finely exposed in cliffs along the coast from Stadthey are finely exposed in cliffs along the coast from Stadland to Bournemeuth and eastwards. They consist of stads of varied colours, containing beds of pipe-clay and brickley. Mr. Gardner estimates the total thickness at 1,000 feet. The clays are largely dug at Wareham, Poole and elsewhere. In 1877 there were exported from Poole Harbour 56,345 tons of clay, most of it for British poteries in Staffordshire &c. but 4,971 tons went to foreign ports; 16,570 tons of clay were also used at works in the district, where ornamental tiles, tesselated pavements &c. are largely made. The clays contain many remains of plants, leaves &c. indicating a rather warm climate. &c. indicating a rather warm climate.

It is not known when the Poole clay was first worked, but there is an "Order in Council" as far back as 1666 directing that no dues were to be paid on "tobacce-pipe clay " at Poole.

SURFACE DEPOSITS.—The chalk is in many places thickly covered by flints, the debris of higher beds of chalk which have been denuded by weathering agencies. There are thick gravels, too, on the table land between Poole and Boarsemouth, containing many pebbles of quartz, granin sc., which have probably been brought from the old Cornist rocks of the west; these are the high-level gravels of Mr. Codrington, and he considers that they were formed in the valley of a river running from west to east, and previous to the separation of the Isle of Wight from the mainland.

Low-level gravels, i. s. such as are not mose that did or the separation of the late of Wight from the maintain.

Low-level gravels, i. s. such as are not more than 40 or 50 feet above the existing rivers, occur in most of the deep combes and along the sides of the valleys. In these, results of the extinct mammenth (Blophas primigenius) and of Rhinocornes ticherhinus have been found, especially in the gravels of the Stour, the Piddle and the Avon.

Ryldence of an elevation of the coast line is afforded by the well-known raised beach at the southern end of the Isle of Portland; it is composed of sea-worn pebbles, at its highest point is 53 feet above sea-level, and contains shells such as inhabit the shores of the English Channel; in Portland, too, many bones have been found in caverns and fissures in the limestone. At many places great masses of a coarse sandstone, called Druid or Sarsen stones, or grey-wethers, are found lying on the surface; one called the Agglestone, near Studland, is computed to weigh 400 tons: these are now believed to be the remnants of some hard bed of the tertiary series, probably the Bagshot Beds, which formerly extended far to the west of their present limits. Of glacial action, no undoubted signs have yet been observed in Dorsetshire.

Masses of blown sand, forming low mounds, occur on the coast in Portland Roads, and at the entrance of Poole Harbour; a famous mass of pebbles—the Chesil beach—stretches for 16 miles between Portland and Burton Bradstock, the stones diminishing regularly in size from 4 inches in diameter at Portland to little more than sand at Bradstock.

PREHISTORIC MAN.—Of the earliest kind of stone implements which are assigned to the Palæolithic Stone Age only two specimens have yet been found in Dorsetshire, one from the gravels at Wimborne Minster, and another at Dewlish, 3 miles north of Piddletown; both are of flint. Of the later or Neolithic Period many specimens have been found: these are mostly chipped out of flint and include celts or axe-heads, arrow-heads, flakes or knives, hammers, scrapers &c. They occur in the surface soil, or in the mounds which are the burial places of the early tribes who inhabited this country. Many are found in and near the famous entrenched camps on the chalk hills at Badbury Rings, Hod Hill, Maiden Castle &c., and at Afflington, Bradford Abbas, Poundbury, Ridgeway Hill &c. In a barrow at Afflington a ring of Kimmeridge shale was found with a bronze ring, flint-flakes and arrow-heads, a perforated whetstone, and glass and bone beads: at Porrington a shallow one-handled saucer or stand of Kimmeridge shale was found; at Winterbourne Steepleton a perforated axe-head made of greenstone was found in a barrow with some burnt bones. All these relies belong to a period which closed some thousands of years before the Christian era, for when Cæsar landed in Britain the inhabitants had long been acquainted with the use of iron.

ABBOTSBURY is a large village and parish near the West Fleet and the sea, 9 miles south-west from Dorchester, 9 north-west from Weymouth and 190 from London, in the Dorchester petty sessional division, Uggescombe hundred, Weymouth union and county court district, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Bridport first portion: it is pleasantly situated in a deep valley open not portion: It is pleasantly situated in a deep valley open to the sea at the south-west and sheltered by lofty-hills to the north. A railway is now in course of construction to connect this place with Weymonth. The church of St. Nicholas is a very ancient Gothic fabric consisting of a chancel, nave and aisles, separated by piers and Pointed arches, fine square embattled tower, 5 bells and antique porch: over the western door is a curious figure emblematic of the over the western door is a curious agure emblemant of the Trinity—an old man in a sitting posture, with a crucifix between his knees and a dove at his right ear: on the north side the windows are Gothic, the walls being surmounted by pinnacles; the windows on the south side are Debased English, 1660: it has an antique font: the sittings are of panelled oak; in the pulpit, which is beautifully carved, are two holes from bullets said to have been fired in at the windows by Cromwell's soldiers; here is also an organ: in the chancel is a handsome oak altar-piece having the Lord's Prayer, the Creed and Ten Commandments in gold letters on a black ground; the remains of Ore the founder are on a black ground; the remains of Ore the founder are deposited under this chancel: in the graveyard is a large stone coffin, dug out of the ruins of the abbey, but whose remains it contained is unknown. The register dates from the year 1557. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £140, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Ilchester, and held by the Rev. George Harry Penny. Here are Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. Charities producing £18 10s. yearly are distributed in money. This place is of great antiquity: Canute, the Danish king, gave it, together with several others to Oro, his favourite steward: in carly ages Bertulf had built a church here which he dediearly ages Bertulf had built a church here which he dedicated to St. Peter; that having gone to decay, Ore founded a monastery in the year 1044, and filled it with monks from Cerne Abbey; he also endowed it with eight of the neighbouring manors: the abbey stood on rising ground south of the village: the ruins of the gateway still remain in tolerable preservation: near this gateway is a gable covered with ivy, supposed to be part of the ruins of a mansion built on the site of and out of the remains of the abbey, by Sir Giles Strange-ways, and in which he resided: the conventual church, traces of which still exist, stood a little to the north of the abbey: the old tithe-barn of the monastery is till in god preservation; it is 165 yards in length, with large porchad buttresses on the north side; adjoining thereto is an hengonal tower. On an eminence south-west of the village are situated the ruins of St. Catherine's chapel, supposed to have been erected in the reign of Edward IV.; it was of stone, strengthened by buttresses on the north and south sides; at the north-west angle is a tower; the roof is finely arched and a few of the ornaments still remain: from its arched and a few of the ornaments still remain: from its altitude it serves for a land and sea mark, being visible at a great distance. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the mackarel fishery and agriculture. Henry VIII. granted the manor to Sir Giles Strangeways kut. and it was confirmed by Blizabeth, with the fishery, water, and sold of East Fleet, also the swannery and site of the monastery of West Fleet: from this family it descended to the Earlo Ilchester r.C. whose seat is Abbotsbury Castle, a Gothic residence, commanding a beautiful view of the West Bay. Nearly a rulle, it the south of the willows are the wranner, deep mile to the south of the village are the swannery, decoy and keeper's house, where as many as 1,500 swans are tep, together with all kinds of wild fowl. The soil is red clay chiefly; a seam of iron ore runs through the village, extent about 3 miles and from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ mile in breadth. The chief crops are wheat and barley, but mostly pasture. The are is $6,618 acres, of which 545 are water; rateable value £5,013; the population in 1871 was 1,065.

BLANDFORD.

BLANDFORD (or BLANDFORD-FORUM) is a municipal borough, market and union town, head of a county court district, parish, station on the South-Western and Midland Companies' Somerset and Dorset joint line of railway, and polling place for the county, in the Blandford petty sessional division, hundred of Pimperne, diocese of Salisbury, arch-deaconry of Dorset, and rural deanery of Pimperne first portion, 16 miles north-east from Dorchester, 10h north-west from Wimborne Minster, 14 north-west from Poole, and 104 from Loudon. The place derived its name from and 104 from London. The place derived its name from being situated near an ancient ford on the river Stour: it being situated near an ancient ford on the river Stour: It was nearly destroyed by fire in the year 1579, but was soon afterwards rebuilt; in 1644 it was plundered by the Parliamentary forces under Major Sydenham: in 1677, and in 1713, it again suffered from fire; and in 1731, was, with the exception of forty houses, consumed by a conflagration, which destroyed the parish of Blandford St. Mary, and the hamlet of Bryanstone; about fourteen aged persons, who were forgotten in the confusion, perished, and several others died afterwards through fatigue and terror; the damage was computed at £100,000: the deplorable situation of the inhabitants was increased by the small-pox, which raged at the time in about sixty families; but very few, however, died from it: the town was rebuilt under the provisions of an Action of the control o fertile district on a bend of the river Stour, over which is a substantial bridge of six arches. The streets are regularly formed, well paved, and lighted with gas; the houses uniformly built of brick, and the inhabitants plentifully supplied With water

The local government, by the Municipal Reform Act, is vested in a mayor, four aldermen and eleven councillors, from the latter of whom the mayor is annually chosen.

The old church named SS. Peter and Paul having been consumed in the fire of 1731, the present church was built in 1732, and is in the style introduced by Wren: it consists of a chancel, nave, aisles and a tower, and was built at a cost of £3,200: the tower is 80 feet high, surmounted by a eupola, and ornamented with a balustrade and urns: capoin, and ornamented with a balustrade and urns: it contains several handsome monuments, and was in 1879 thoroughly restored at a cost of about £800. The register dates from the year 1732. The living is a rectory and ricarage, yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester, and held by the Rev. Charles Henry Fynes-Clinton M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Cambridge.

Here are Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapele.

The charitable bequests to Blandford have been numerous. fiere is a school called the Milldown School, endowed with £25 a year. The Blue Coat School, for clothing and instructing 12 poor boys, was founded and endowed by Archbishop Wake in 1729: in 1621 William Williams esq.

gave £3.000 (since laid out in land, and producing about £646 a year), for teaching poor children and for other charitable purposes: there are almshouses situate in Salisbury endrance purposes: there are annual ones structure. Struct, for the maintenance of 10 poor persons, founded and endowed by George Ryves esq. in 1682, and who, in 1685, bequeathed the residue of his estate for apprenticing poor boys, natives of Blandford and Pimperne; the entire annual income is about £210: in the churchyard are others for six aged persons, which were rebuilt by the Corporation in 1736: charities, excluding Williams' above, to the amount of £350, are distributed yearly.

A Literary Institution has been founded in this town, and a Working Men's Club, which are well supported; also an Industrial School for the training of young women of good character for domestic service.

The Town Hall is of Portland stone, supported by columns, with a carved entablature of the Doric order; in the rear a commodious Corn Exchange has been erected, in which is an eight-day clock, presented by Mr. Wyatt, clock and watch maker, of this town.

The market, which is well attended, is held on Wednesday and Saturday; and the fairs, principally for sheep, horses and horned cattle, are held on the 7th of March, 9th of September, and 8th of November, and for cheese the Saturday next before the 10th of July.

The making of shirt-buttons, for which Blandford has long been famous, still affords employment to a few females, bat Birmingham has engrossed nearly the entire trade of button

This town gives the title of Marquis to the eldest son of the Duke of Mariborough: many distinguished persons have been born in Blandford, among whom may be noticed Sir Thomas Ryves LLD. a learned antiquary and civilian; the Rev. Bruno Ryves D.D. dean of Windsor; the Rev. Thomas Creech M.A. poet, and translator of Lucretius; Thomas Basiard A.B. a divine and poet; William Wake, archbishop of Cantesbury: Dr. Lindson of Maragh: Dr. of Canterbury; Dr. Lindsay, archbishop of Armagh; Dr. Samuel Lisle, bishop of Norwich; and the Rev. Christopher Pitt, translator of "Virgil's Æneld."

The neighbourhood is very rich in Roman and British remains. In the vicinity are some extensive fortified camps and numerous barrows, in which sword blades, axe and spear heads, fibules, coins, ornaments, uras, and a variety of ancient remains have been discovered; many have been preserved, and interesting collections exist in private hands. Fossils are also numerous in the chalk and green-sand of the district. Viscount Portman is lord of the manor and principal land-

The parish contains 862 acres; rateable value, £10,190, in 1871. The population in 1871 was, parish, 4,052; manor or borough, 1,536; local board district, 4,011.

BLOXWORTH (or BLOCKSWORTH) is a parish in the Wareham petty sessional division and county court district, hundred of Coomb's Ditch, union of Wareham and Purbeck, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Whitchurch second portion, situ-sted about 6 miles north-by-west from Wareham. The church of St. Andrew is a small ancient structure, with chancel, nave (the former was rebuilt and restored by the present rector in 1870), and square tower containing 2 bells, one of which is of the 14th century, and around the rim is a very curious inscription: it contains several memorials to the Trenchard and Pickard families, and the manorial pew has fresco armorial designs belonging to the Savages, lords of the manor previous to the year 1700: this is one of the very few churches where the original hour glass and stand by which, after the Reformation, the length of the sermon was regulated, still exists. The register dates from the year 1579. The living is a rectory, yearly value £320, in the gift of Henry Pickard-Cambridge esq. and held by the Rev. Octavius Pickard-Cambridge M.A. of University College, Durham, who is also the rector of Winterbourne Thompson. On the beath are WOOLBARROW, or Oldbury, and other barrows; Henry Pickard-Cambridge esq. Jr., D.L. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The parish comprises a long strip of land about 31 miles by 11 between the parishes of Morden and Bere Regis, running north and south: the soil of the northern portion is chalk, of the middle, clay and of the southern part gravel and sand. BRIDPORT.

a seaport, parliamentary and municipal BRIDPORT is borough, and market and union town (having separate jurisdiction), head of a county court district, and railway station, in the hundred of Sturminster, though locally in the hundred of Sturminster, the sturminster, the sturminster, the sturminster, the sturminster, the sturminster, the sturminster dred of Whitchurch Canonicorum, diocese of Salisbury, arch-deaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Bridport second portion, 15 miles west from Dorchester, 34 from Taunton, 6 portion, 15 miles west from Dorchester, 34 from Taunton, 6 south from Beaminster, 9 east from Lyme Regis, 21 northwest from Weymouth, 135 by road and 163 by railway from London: the Great Western railway has a branch from Maiden Newton to this town, which gives access to Dorchester on the South Western railway, and Yeovil on the Great Western; thus giving two distinct lines of communication with the metropolis and other parts of the kingdom. This place takes its name from the river Bride or Bredy, which falls into the sea at Burton Freshwater, about a mile east of the harbour of the town. This was a place of some importance in the time of Edward the Confessor and is menioned in Domesday Book as having a mint and esclesiastical tioned in Domesday Book as having a mint and ecclesiastical establishment: it was made a borough in the reign of Henry III.: its charter underwent various alterations during subsequent reigns. The governing charter, prior to the Municipal Act, was that granted by Charles II.; its present municipal and parliamentary limits are co-extensive, and comprise, in addition to the ancient borough, portions of the parishes of Allington, Bradpole, Walditch, Bothenhampton, Burton-Bradstock and Symondsbury. The town is divided into two wards, the North and South, and governed by a mayor, at aldermen and eighteen councillors, who constitute the tioned in Domesday Book as having a mint and ecclesiastical six aldermen and eighteen councillors, who constitute the town council, under the style of Balliffs and Burgesses of peace, appointed by the Crown for life: it formerly returned two members to Parliament, but by "The Representation of the People Act, 1867," it now returns one member only.

The town is situated in a fertile vale, surrounded by hills, having on the west the river Bride or Brit, and on the east the river Asker, over which are several bridges; these rivers unite a little below the town: it chiefly consists of three spacious streets, containing many handsome modern houses, is lighted with gas and well paved.

lighted with gas and well paved.

The church of St. Mary, enlarged and thoroughly restored in 1859, is a spacious cruciform structure, chiefly in the Later style of English architecture, consisting of chancel, nave with north and south transepts and south chapel, with a square embattled tower rising from the centre and crowsed with pinnacles; within are some interesting monuments; one, a cross-legged effigy of a knight, supposed to have been one of the De Chideock family: there is a small mural tablet to the memory of Lieut. Coker, of Mappowder, killed at the Bull Hotel by one Venner, an officer of the 'Duke of Momouth, in the Monmouth rebellion, 1685. The register dates from the year 1647. The living is a discharged rector, yearly value £250, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of the diocese and held by the Rev. Edward John Lambert B. Henslowe Ll. B. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Henslowe LL.B. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

Here is a Catholic church, also Wesleyan, Congregations, Baptist, Brethren, Unitarian chapels and a Meeting house for the Society of Friends.

The Cemetery, of 4 acres, is situated 1 mile from the centre of the town, on the road to Dorchester; the same the Borough of Bridport; there are also four justices of the | mortuary chapels are suitable structures.

A School of Art was established in 1865; it is well supported by the inhabitants. Government assisted in the formation, but the current expenses are defrayed by sub-

There are several charities for clothing and education.

The Town Hall is a handsome brick building, faced with Portland stone: it was erected in 1786, on the site of the ancient chapel of St. Andrew, in the centre of the town, containing in the upper storey a court for the horough sessions, a room for the grand jury, and a council chamber, underneath which is held the general market for butchers' meat. The market days are Wednesday and Saturday. The fairs are held on the 11th of October and the 6th of April, for cattle and cheese.

The trade of the port consists principally in the importation of timber from Canada and Norway. There is also a considerable coasting trade, by which the adjacent towns are supplied with coal from Wales and the collieries in the North of England, and with other articles of general consumption. The harbour, which will take vessels of 250 tons, is situated in the bay which is formed by the headlands near Portland on the east and Tor Point on the west. The principal manufactures are those of fishing-nets, twines, shoe-thread, and sailcloth, made largely both for home and foreign consumption, much flax to produce which is grown in the adjacent parishes. There is some shipbuilding. On the river Bredy there are two large flax mills.

BROADWAY (or BROADWEY), so named because here the river Wey, rising at Upway, broadens: it is a pleasant village, 3 miles north from Weymouth, 5 south from Dorchester and 145 from London, in the petty sessional division of Dorchester, union and county court district of Weymouth, hundred of Culliford Tree, diocese of Salisbury, that quality termed hepatic or sulphureous. Roman remains have been found in severa parts of the parish. The church of St. Nicholas was enlarged by the addition of a chancel aisle, and partially re-seated, an organ erected and an east memorial window inserted, in 1874; it is remarkable for a Norman door and ancient timber roof, also a Norman font and oak pulpit of Elizabethan date; there is a bell turret: In the churchyard is a monument containing two portrait medallions by the celebrated sculptor, F. C. Burnard esq. in memory of his daughter and brother-in-law. The register dates from the year 1661. The living is a rectory, consolidated with Bincombe, joint yearly value £487, in the gift of the Master and Pellows of Caius College, Cambridge, and held by the Rev. Daniel Beales Redfarn Banham M.A. formerly fellow of that college. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, also a very fine temperance hall, erected in 1879; it will seat 500 people, and has reading and coffee rooms attached. The

The church of St. Mary is a handsome stone-and-flint-built edifice, in the Perpendicular style, and stone-ann-nint-built edince, in the respendentar syle, and consists of nave and asiles and a fine tower with 5 bells and chimes. The register dates from about the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £73 and 2 acres of glebe, in the gift of Lord Rivers and held by the Rev. Henry Dickenson Gundry. Here are Congregational and Methodist chapels. Meller's charity of £10 is distributed to the control of the property of the manufacture of the tower are the manufacture. yearly. The principal trades of the town are the manufac-ture of leather and brewing. Cerne is chiefly entitled to notice from its giant, a figure cut in outline, 180 feet long, on the side of a hill to the north-east of the town: this figure is supposed to be that of the Saxon God Heil (or Hercules), and if so, is at least 1,200 years old: others refer it to Celtic times: there is a similar figure cut in the downs near Wilmington, in Sussex. This little town has the remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by St. Augustine, whose name is still borne by a remarkable spring of water near the ruins: the earliest authentic trace of it, however, is the foundation of Ailmar, or Elward, Earl of Cornwall, about the year 980 A.D.: the gateway of this once extensive monastery still remains in a tolerable state of preservation. Meetings of the Highway Board for the Cerne division are held here. There are two fairs during the year, Mid-Lent Monday and 2nd of October. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is light gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 3,063 acres; rateable value, £4,978; the population in 1871 was 1,164. Parish Clerk, Robert Childs.

CORFE CASTLE is a member of the parliamentary borough of Wareham, a village and parish and corporate town, in the Wareham petty sessional division and county court district, Wareham and Purbeck union, hundred of court district, warenam and rurieux union, numera or Corfe Castle, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Dorchester third portion, 5 miles south-east from Warenam station, 21 south-east from Dorchester and 130 from London: it is situated nearly in the centre of the Isle or Peninsula of Purbeck, and derives its name and origin from the ancient castle : its first charter, granted by Queen Elizabeth, conferred on the inhabitants equal privileges with the Cinque Ports: it is governed by a mayor and berons. The church of St. Edward the Martyr was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1859-1860, from designs by Wyatt, and consists of chancel and chancel aisles, nave and aisles, and an ancient west tower, with an interesting doorway, and a peal of 6 bells: the chancel is enriched by a stained east window, in memory of lady Charlotte Bankes; a fine reredos has been added by the Earl of Eldon, from designs by G. E. Street esq. R.A.: there are six other memorial windows: the stained window in the party size was a state of the stained window in the party size was a state of the stained window in the stained window in the stained window in the stained window. south aisle was erected by the rector in memory of his youngest son; that at the west end is in memory of Captain Sir George Biddlecombe, knight: there is an organ, and a very beautiful ancient font of Purbeck marble: the chancel very beautiful ancient font of Purbeck marble: the chancel is built of the Purbeck stone and Purbeck marble, which is effectively introduced in the columns of the chancel and other parts of the interior. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £680, with residence, in the gift of W. R. Bankes esq. the proprietor of Kingston Lacey, near Wimborne, and held by the Rev. Eldon Surtees Bankes M.A. of University College, Oxford. The Rev. Charles Goddard Doyne B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge and the Rev. Robert Harland, are the curretee. Cambridge, and the Rev. Robert Harland, are the curates. A museum for depositing the rich geological, natural and ancient curiosities has been established in East street. The trade of Corfe Castle for many centuries has consisted chiefly in stone, and grey marble generally known by the name of Purbeck marble, which abounds not only in the vicinity of this place, but throughout the Isle of Purbeck; and the fact of its being found in the interior of almost every old cathedral and church in the kingdom, as well as in many foreign bare been very considerable. After the introduction of foreign marble, the trade in Purbeck marble declined, and it fell into disuse until the restoration of the Temple Church, London (1842), when inquiries were set on foot as to the material of which its pillars were composed, and after considerable research it was ascertained to have come from the sucrante research the was assertanted to have been said of purbeck; this circumstance seems likely to be the means of bringing the article again into repute. The font of means of bringing the article again into repute. The font of the church of Harrow-on-the-Hill, 700 years old, is formed of this material; the nave of St. Alban's Abbey and the cathedrals of Salisbury, Winchester, Canterbury and Gloucester contain specimens of this marble. A number of the inhabitants are now employed digging potters' clay, large quantities of which are exported to all parts. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 29th October. The charities are £80 yearly. The market is discontinued. The castle stands on yearly. The market is discontinuou. The casus simus on a lofty eminence commanding the Corfe, or gap, which here occurs in the Purbeck range: the walls follow the creat of the hill, which descends almost vertically on the east, west and north sides. The northern, or highest point, is occupied by the noble ruins of the Keep and principal buildings; the great gateway stands at the southern, or lowest angle; the Butavant or "Dungeone towre," the western; and the Queen's hall, or tower, rises near the eastern angle, the whole enclosing an area of about $\frac{3}{2}$ acres, which is divided into 3 wards—the outer (byfar the largest), the middle, and the inner ward: a bridge of 4 arches, crossing a deep dry moat, connects the castle with the town. A full and admirable detailed account of the history of the castle is given by Mr. T. Bond, in the last edition of "Hutchins' History of Dorset."

of Dorset."

The earliest mention of Corfe is in connexion with the murder of King Edward the Martyr, A.D. 978. Elfrida's "house" stood here, and in March of that year, by her hand, or by her instigation, King Edward was assassinated on his horse at the door of her hospice; his foot being entangled in the stirrup, he was dragged away by the affrighted animal till it reached the brook on the Wareham side of the mound, where the body of the unfortunate prince was found and taken to Wareham, whence it was afterwards removed with great pomp to Shaftesbury. William the Conqueror next appears connected with the fortress, as having caused the Keep or great tower to be built. Stephen, in his wars with Matilda, found the castle impregnable. John made it a royal residence and considered it the safest depository of his treasure and regalia; here, also, he confined the Princess Alinor, sister of his victim Arthur, in company with the two daughters of the King of Scotland. From Corfe Castle, Edward II. was taken to Berkley by his murderers Sir John Matravers, of Langton Matravers, and Sir John Gurney. Elizabeth bestowed the domain upon her favourite, Sir Christopher Hatton, who was in 1587 made Lord High Chancellor: in 1635, it passed by purchase into the possession of the then Attorney-General, Sir John Baukes, atterwards Lord Chief Justice, the ancestor of the family of Bankes, of Kingston Lacey, where the key and seal of the castle are still preserved; in 1643 it was taken by treachery, by the Parliamentary forces, and months were occupied in reducing it to its present state by gunpowder. A little to the north-east of Corfe Castle is Rempstone Hall, the seat of Lady Caroline Calcraft. The principal landowners are W. Ralph Bankes esq. who is lord of the manor, the Earl of Eldon, the representatives of the late J. H. Calcraft esq. J.P. and Nathaniel Bond esq. The soil is various; subsoil, chalk. CRANBORNE is a town and extensive parish, comprising the town and nine small hamlets, in the petty sessional division of Wimborne, hundred of its name, Wimborne union and county court district, diocese of Salisbury, archeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Pimperne second portion, on the borders of Wiltshire and Hampshire: the town is 4 miles north from Verwood and 4 north-west from Degraces Read stations (which pre: in this parish) on the Daggons Road stations (which are in this parish), on the London and South-Western railway, 10 north-west from Ringwood, 100 from London and 10 north from Wimborne. The chase formerly belonging to the manor was disfranchised in 1830: the houses are built without uniformity: the river Crane flows through the parish. The church of St. Bartholomew (once attached to a monastery, founded about the year 980) is one of the oldest, as well as one of the largest, in the country: it contains a chancel (rebuilt in 1875 by the Marquis of Salisbury), nave, aisles, a Norman doorway, also large square tower containing 6 bells: it has been repaired and re-seated with open benches, at an expense of upwards of £700, raised by a loan on the security of the rates, and by sabscription: a clock was placed in the tower, at an expense of

by the Rev. Herbert Goodenough Rogers M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. This parish, which is the largest in the county, extending as it does from north to south nearly 13 miles, includes Monkton-up-Wimborne, Verwood, Three Legged Cross, ALDBRHOLT, BOVERIDGE, Daggons, Crendell, Cripplestyle, HOLWELL and Blagdon, most of them scattered, and although styled hamlets, having no distinctive character to entitle them to such an appellation. ALBERHOLT, DAGGONS, CRENDELL, and CRIPPLESTYLE, in the cast of the parish, were formed in 1849 into a district precelesiastical purposes, and a church (St. James) was to reclesiastical purposes, and a church (St. James) was erected by the Marquis of Salisbury, and endowed by the Marquis and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the former contributing £25 yearly, and the latter, until recently £75, but now nearly £100 a year: the church consists of small out now nearly £100 a year; the church consists of small chancel and nave. The register dates from the year 1849. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £125 with residence, in the gift of the vicar of Cranborne, and held by the Rev. John William Barrow, of Magdalen College, Oxford. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodish have each a the college of the providing of the college. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Here is a charity, called Hutchin's, for providing reat coats, in December, for a number of poor men and women; and another charity was in 1831 founded by John Miles, to give 3s. 6d. weekly each to four poor men and four poor women in the parish. At Boveridge are almshouses for five aged persons, who have each a weekly allowance of is. There are two fairs held annually—one on the 24th of August, for pleasure; the other on the 6th of December, for the sale of pigs and cheese. The Salisbury family take their second title of Viscount Cranborne from this place. Cranborne is a place of great antiquity, and was of some importance in the Roman and Saxon times. On the Castle Hill, a little south of the town, is a circular fortification, Hill, a little south of the town, is a circular fortification, with a well in its area, both supposed to be of Saxon origin. The principal landowners are the Marquis of Salisbury K.G. who is lerd of the manor, the Earls of Shaftesbury and Normanton, H. F. Brouncker esq. W. Fryer esq. and G. Churchill esq. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, nett yearly value £170, in the gift of Simeon's trustees, and held by the Rev. Henry Prederick Jones B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin.

Fordington church, St. George, stands on an eminence; it is an ancient stone structure, originally built in the form of a cross; consisting of chancel, nave, ais es, and north transept; it has a high embattled tower, with pinnacles, and a clock; over the south porch is a tympanum, representing the vision of St. George before the battle of Antioch, rudely carved in stone. The register dates from the year 1690. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £325, with residence, in the gift of the prebend of Fordington in Salisbury cathedral, and held by the Rev. Arthur Allen Leonard M.A. of Orici College, Oxford.

West Fordington is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1847 from the parish of Fordington. Christ church, half a mile north-west of the town, was erected in 1846; it is a plain Portland stone edifice, consisting of chancel, nave and transepts, with I bell. The register dates from the year 1846. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £80, in the gift of the vicar of Pordington, and held by the Rev. William Cook Osborn M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

The Pree Grammar School, founded in 1569 by Mr Hardy, is situated in South street: it is at present (1830) undergoing considerable alterations; and a new scheme has been propounded by the Charity Commissioners for amalga-mating all the Dorchester charities (except Napier's and Whetstone's) for its support.

There are Baptist, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Congregational chapels: the new Wesleyan chapel in South street, built in 1875 in the Italian style, is very handsome, and cost £4,000: the architect was Mr. Samuel Jackson, Weymouth, and the builders Mesers. Davis and Sons, of this town.

The charities of the town consist of three almshouses:-Napier's Almshouse, in South street, which is liberally endowed, was founded by Sir Gerard Napier for the support of ten poor men, who also receive 4s. 6d. a week, and have a piece of ground, which they cultivate; this building is and Chubb's Almshouse, for nine poor women, who receive 2s. 6d. a week each.

The Corn Exchange is a bold and commodious building, erected in 1867: it is of brick; with stone dressings, and is octagonal at the end, the roof being open timbered, covered with slate and glass, supported on lofty semicircular iron and moulded wood principals, the ends of which are domed: a gallery is formed under same : a thorough system of ventilation and heating has been adopted: the cost of the work amounted to about £2,500.

A Cattle Market was laid out with sheds &c. near the station in 1877. The Market House is of stone and brick, and was built by Samuel Slade, in 1848, from designs by Benjamin Ferry esq. in the Elizabethan style, and re-arranged in 1837: there are two markets held—the small one on Wednesdays, conducted by auction by Mr. G. Ensor, and the larger one on Saturdays, alternately by Mr. Thomas Ensor and Giles Symonds, of Sydling.

The fairs are held February 14th, July 6th, August 6th, September 29th and October 25th, for horses, sheep and cattle.

The County Hall is a spacious and well-arranged building, fronted with Portland stone; the assizes, quarter sessions and county courts are held there.

Her Majesty's Prison is a handsome building, situated on the north side of the town, on the site of the ancient castle, and was erected in 1793, on the plan of Mr. Howard, at an expense of £16,179, since which it has been enlarged and much improved, extra wings having been add d: it now contains 140 sleeping cells: there are likewise reception cells fitted up in the lodge, a house of correction and a treadmill: the wings of the prison, although detached, communicate with the centre building in each story by iron bridges sprung from the several galleries: an entrance, with porter's lodge, and six houses for the turnkeys, have been erected from the north square. Since being taken over by the Government from the court articles the state of the state over by the several galleries. Government from the county extensive alterations have been and are being made.

The Dorset County Hospital, in the south part of the town, and in a very healthy situation, is in the Tudor style: a wing was added in the year 1866: at present it has beds for 60 patients, but possesses ample room for a larger number.

The Cemetery for the parishes of All Saints, Holy Trinity and St. Peter's is in the Weymouth road. A burial board has been formed for the parish of Fordington, and the churchyard at Fordington enlarged.

The Artillery Barracks and military depôt are situated at the western extremity of the town. Dorchester is the head quarters of the 39th brigade depôt of the Southern Military district and of the 1st Administrative Battalion of Rifle

The neighbourhood abounds with Roman antiquities. About a quarter of a mile south of the town is the cele-brated Roman amphitheatre; it is formed of raised mounds of earth partly enclosing an open space, but the mounds do not entirely inclose the interior space, as there is an opening at the north between their sloping points: the largest external diameter is 343 feet, the shortest 339 feet, so that externally it is nearly a circle: it is supposed that in the thickest part of the sides were the dens for the wild beasts, that they might be let out opposite to each other to meet in the arena: it is computed that 12,000 persons could witness the combats.

About 2 miles south-west of the town, in the parish of Winterborne St. Martin, is the famous MAIDEN CASTLE, an ancient and extensive Roman camp, situated on an im-mense hill overlooking the surrounding country: it is mense and overlooking the surrounding country: it is encircled by deep intrenchments and ramparts four deep: on the top is a table-land, of oval shape, covering upwards of 40 acres: the whole space to the foot of the outer entrenchment is 120 acres: it is supposed to be one of the strongest of these fortified castles in England: on the adjoining hills are several barrows.

POUNDBURY, half a mile west of the town, is another encampment, with immense earthworks thrown up, nearly square, the top of which comprises 20 acres of land: several stone coffins and other antiquities have been found at different times. The whole country north and south of the river is traversed by Roman roads, and sites of Roman establishments, as Stinsford, Stafford, Burton, Wrackleford, Stratton, Southover, Bradford, Woodsford.

The population of the municipal and parliamentary borough in 1871 was 6,915.

FORDINGTON is an extensive parish in this burough. The land until about three years ago was unenclosed, but is now enclosed with neat iron fences; the farms have been made larger and in fewer holdings, and a large portion sold for building sites contiguous to the town: it has a fac turnip and barley soil, chiefly belonging to the Ducky of Cornwall, and the property of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

FROME, WHITFIELD, COKER'S PROOME (the property of George Mayo esq. of Puddlehinton), and COLLITON ROW, half a mile north, are hamlets in Holy Trinity parish.

Parish Clerks:—Bast Fordington, James White; West Fordington, David Cross; Trinity, William Gold; All Saints', George Wood; St. Peter's, Jas. R. E. Curis.

LYME REGIS.

LYME REGIS is a seaport, municipal borough, market town and parish, situated 143 miles from London by road and 150 by rail, 54 south-east from Axminster (its n-arest railway station), 24 west from Dorchester, 9 west from Bridport, 16 from Sidmouth, 16 from Crewkerne, 16 from Honton and 2 from Charmouth; it is in the liberty of Loaders and Bothenhampton, division of Bridport, Axminster union and county court district, Bridport rural deaners third portion, Docset archdeaconry and Salisbury diocese.

This place derives its name from the river Lym, on which it is situated. Edward I. gave to it the privileges of a borough and port, an isssigned it as part of the dower of his sister, Margaret Queen of Scotland: it furnished Edward III. with tour ships and 62 men for the slege of Calais: but afterwards became impoverished; in Cauden's time it was little better than a fishing town. The siege of this place in afterwards evenue impoverished; in Cameen's time it was little better than a fishing town. The siege of this place in the Civil War was a very remarkable one, and described particularly by Clarendon. Here landed the Duke of Mon-mouth in the year 1685. Captain Thomas Coram, the founder of the Foundling Hospital, London, was born here and was buried in the hospital in 1750. The town is situated at that extremity of the county which borders on Devonshire, between two rocky hills, and is divided by the river Lym, which rises about 2 miles northward: it has within the last century attained a flourishing condition, having become a fashionable watering-place, and has all the conveniences of a harbour by means of an artificial breakwater called the Cobb. The shore is bold and rugged, the surrounding scenery remarkably fine, commanding an extensive sea vi-w, with richly diversified and picturesque landscapes. This district is well known to geologists, as presenting one of the grandest and most extensive sections of the blue lias in the grandest and most extensive sections of the blue lias in the world. Immense quantities of blue lias limestone are annually exported to all parts of England and the Continent, for the purpose of making hydraulic lime and cement. There is now a cement manufactory under the cliffs, to the west of the Cobb: some of the upper beds are used for making Roman and Portland cement. Fossil remains abound in the cliffs and continuous properties and the Cobb is some of the label to come the label to come and the comment of the label to come particularly those of the Ichthyosaurus, Plesiosaurus, Plicaurus and Pierodactylus amongat the vertebrated forms of life, those of the ammonite and belemnite amongst the molkusta, and those of the pentacrinite and the apiocrinite amongst the crinoids: four varieties of the Ichthyosaurus are communi. platyodon, tenuirostris and intermedius; some new species have been discovered of late years; numerous fine specimens discovered by the late Mary Anning, H. Marder M.R.C.S. Mr. J. W. Marder, the late Mr. J. Harrison and other collectors, may be seen in the British Museum. The Plesionarry. of which delichedeirus is the most common species, is more of which doing dearus is the most common specials, is soon rare than the lichthyosaurus: the first specimen discovered and developed by Mary Anning, and purchased by the Puke of Buckingham, is now in the British Museum. There are other varieties, as macrocephalus arcustus, and Haskinsii. The ammonites and belemnites are very numerous and in the model of actions. heautiful, besides about seventy or eighty varieties of extinc:

and to the west of a very picturesque character, caused in a great measure by the landslips which have occurred on various occasions, particularly one at Christmas, 1839, about 31 miles from the town, on the Sidmouth road.

The harbour, which affords the only safe shelter for versels between the Portland Roads and the Start Point, below Dartmouth, in Devenshire, is about a quarter of a mile west-south-west from the town, and existed as early as the time of Edward III. The breakwater, called the Cobb, which forms the harbour, was originally composed of large pieces of rock, rudely piled on each other, but is now a work of regular mesonry of Portland stome, consisting of two artificial piers projecting on each side, and enclosing a basin: it is 636 feet in length, 12 feet in breadth at the foundation, and 16 feet in height: it was partly rebuilt by Government, at a sum lower than the estimate, under the superintendence of Captain Fanshawe, as recorded in a tablet on the Cobb, in 1825, at an expense of £17,337 0s. 94d. The name is derived from the Cobb-stone with which it was originally constructed: various acts have been passed for its main-Dartmouth, in Devenshire, is about a quarter of a mile constructed: various acts have been passed for its main-tenance; by a charter of Charles II. £100 yearly out of its customs, were allowed for its repair, which grant is now obsolete. Bonded stores have been erected here, and an obsolete. Bonded stores have been created more, and officer, called Cobb-warden, is annually chosen to superisomoer, camen coso-waruen, is annuary chosen to superna-tend it: the harbour dues are employed by the Town Coun-cil in executing the necessary repairs. At the Cobb is the Custom House, with a collector and assistant examining officer. The coast-guard station is also here, under an inofficer. The constructure season is also here, under an inspecting commander and lieutesants in command. A house for the lifeboat is on the beach, west of the Cobb.

The streets are lighted with gas, and well paved; and many of the shope and other buildings are built of the blue lias limestone, and covered with elate.

By the "Municipal Corporation Act" of 1836, the tewn in governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, and formerly sent one member to Parliament, but was disfranchised by the "Representation of the People (Scotland), Act, 1808." Sessions are held every Wednesday, at 11 o'clock, at the Town Hall, before the mayor and borough magistrates: and there is a court of hustings for harbour business every Monday.

The church of St. Michael the Archangel is an ancient edifice, situated near the edge of some precipitous lies cliffs, and has been much beautified by the present vicar: the architecture is of the Late Tudor period, but it contains a architecture is of the Late Tudor period, but it contains a good Norman arch at the western entrance: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, with square tower containing clock and peal of 6 bells: it contains a curiously carved old oak pulpit, presented by one of the merchant adventurers, a number of mural monuments, several brases, some fine stained windows, and a good toned organ: there are sittings for 900. The parish register dates from the year 1543, but breaks off for a few years from 1572: the following facts appears from the entries—the church was erected in 711. appear from the entries—the church was erected in 711, and a legacy was given to rebuild part of it in 1503, and that it belonged to Sarum in 1284: an earthquake took place here in 1688, and another in 1799: the 31st of May, 1759, the sea flowed three times in an hour, it also did the same in 1797: in 1653 a proclamation of a marriage was made in the market place, where the Assembly Rooms now stand,

The scenery of the coast to the eastward is most beautiful, by Christopher Knight, mayor and justice of the peace: and to the west of a very picturesque character, caused in a large fire took place in the year 1844, burning the Custom reat measure by the landships which have occurred on va-House, the 'Cups' hotel, and the sucient inn, the 'George,' where the Duke of Monmouth quartered when he lauded. where the Duke of Monmouth quartered when he lauded. The living is a vicarage, present yearly value about £275, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury and held by the Rev. Prederic Thomas Auelius Parry Hodges D.c.L. late fellow of New College, Oxford, and fellow of Winchester College, and surrogate, who has built a convenient parsonage-house.

There are two small charities for the poer left by Captain James and Mr. Burridge.

The Catholic chapel of SS. Michael and George, situate in the Uplyme road, contains some stained windows; the high altar, sanctuary and Lady chapel are aderned with carving, gold and colours; in the nave are a series of sculptures; the Rev. William Francis Downing is the priest.

There is a spacious Congregational chapel, one for the Baptists, one for the Wesleyan Methodists, and a place of ting for The Brethren.

The Cemetery, consisting of three acres, is a short distance from the town, on the Charmouth road. It contains two mortuary chapels, and a hall for the reception of persons dying of infectious diseases.

A regatta is held annually in the month of August, which is well attended. Lyme has a company of volunteer artil-

The market days are Tuesday and Friday for butchers' meat, poultry and vegetables. The fairs are held on the first Tuesday after Candlemas and Michaelmas.

The principal hotels are the 'Cope' and the 'Royal Lion.' This is a favourable watering-place, and is mack resorted to by families: being well shelved from the northerly and casterly winds is a great inducement for invalidation make to by mannes: being wen sheltered from the hortzerly and easterly winds, is a great inducement for invalidation make it their residence. The rate of mortality from consumption and pulmonary diseases is as low, if not lower, than that of any town in the kingdom: it is a manatorium in general for sickly children, and one of the best residences on the coast for nervous diseases, and patients suffering from its long train of symptoms. Since the opening of the military to Bridgings and the South Wastern line of the railway to Bridport and the South Westers line to Axminster the access has been comparatively easy from all directions.

The Assembly Sabscription Rooms have been enlarged, at a cost of £700, and contain a large ball or concert room, biffiard room, and reading room facing the sea, with suitable offices; there is also upstairs a separate room used as a place of worship for The Brethren.

Henry Cornish Henley esq. of Leigh House, Chard, is lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

The area is 1,380 acres; rateable value, £9,742; the population of the borough in 1871 was 2,333, and of the parish, 2,603.

POOLE, 6 miles south from Wimborne, 9½ north-east from Wareham, 12 south-east from Blandford, 22 east from Dorchester, 30 north-east from Weymouth and 121 from London, is a station on the Wimborne, New Poole, Parkstone and Bournemouth branch of the South Western railway, head of a union and county court district, in the diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and deanery of Whitehurch first portion: it is a town and county of itself and the county of itself and the county of itself and it itself, governed by a corporation, under the title of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses. By the Municipal Boundary Act the tithings of LONGFLEET and PARKSTONE, both in the parish of Canford Magna, and also the parish of HAMWORTHY, were added to and now form part of the county of the town of Poole. The town and county, so constituted, has a sheriff, elected annually, who has the exclusive execution of all writs and processes in such county and borough, with the exception of those issuing from the Court of Record. The council consists of six aldermen and eighteen councillors, the representatives of two wards, into which the town and county is divided. Poole has a court of quarter sessions: it is a very ancient borough, possessing immunities before 1248, in which year the celebrated William. Longespee, lord of the manor, granted it a charter : in this document a portreeve is mentioned. Poole formerly returned two members to Parliament, but by "The Representation of the People Act, 1867," it now returns one member only.

The alteration in the names of the railway stations here are as follows:—the old Poole junction is now called Hamworthy junction; and the former Poole station is now called Hamworthy station. Here is a new Poole junction, 2 miles from Wimborne, 34 from Longfleet (which adjoins Poole), called New Poole station, which is 44 miles from Bourne-

Poole stands on a beautiful inlet of the sea, near the south-eastern extremity of the county of Dorset. The town, which is neatly built and remarkably clean, is situated on a peninsula jutting into the harbour: it occupies a tract of zround nearly one mile long and three-quarters of a mile broad. The principal streets are parallel from north-east to south-west; there are many substantial and well-built louses.

Poole harbour, more especially when the tide is in, presents much scenic beauty; and the traveller approaching the town from almost any direction, cannot fail to be struck with its picturesque situation. The water, nearly surroundwith its picturesque situation. The water, nearly surrounding the town, spreading over a surface broken by islands and projecting headlands;—the shores, of a diversified character, here rise abruptly, then retire into a low flat, and are in many parts richly wooded;—the back ground is formed by the bold and well-defined outline of the Purbeck hills, giving relief to the sombre ruins of Corfe Castle in their front. The island and castle of Branksea form a pleasing termination to one side of the view, whilst the other is bounded by the undulation of the distant hills; the whole combine to produce seenery of a rare distinction and agreeable kind; and as the communication between the harbour combine to produce scenery of a fare distinction and agree-able kind; and as the communication between the harbour is hidden by the overlapping of Branksea Island and the opposite sand-banks, the appearance is that of a large inland lake. The equable temperature here renders the town of Poole generally healthy and a desirable residence for those whose physical constitution may require avoidance of the more extreme variations in the heat.

Villa residences have been erected at Parkstone, on the hills which are clothed with trees of the fir tribe, which afford shelter from the wind and secure an equable climate. A large district of land has been laid out for building first-class detached residences.

The church of St. James, which is the parish church of The church of St. James, which is the parish church of Poole, is of stone, was erected in 1820 on the site of an ancient building; it is surrounded by a spacious church-yard: the edifice consists of chancel, nave, aisles and galleries; in the west is the organ and a clock: the galleries are supported by five clustered pillars on each side, of pitch are supported by nive clustered philars on each side, of pitch pine coated with plaster: the ceiling is groined, with rich gilt bosses: the reading desk and pulpit are of richly carved oak: the principal entrance is the west door, through a square clock tower with a fine peal of 8 bells: the walls are all embattled. The interior was thoroughly repaired and embellished in 1871, at a cost of £300, raised by voluntary contributions. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is an impropriate rectory, with rent-charge of £400, in the gift of trustees and held by the Rev. John Archibald Lawson.

The ecclesiastical parish of St. Paul was formed in 1861. The church is situated near the upper end of the High street. ine church is situated near the upper end of the High street: it is a small structure in the Grecian style, of white brick with stone dressings, erected in 1833, and contains about 700 sittings—of which 200 are free; a gallery occupies the west, in which is an organ; at the east end is a chancel, on west, in which is an organ: at the east end is a chancel, on either side of which is a gallery for children: the east front is surmounted by a tower: the cost of erection, including the purchase of land, was about £4,000, the whole defrayed by voluntary contributions. The present edifice being found too small for the requirements of the parish, it has been determined to rebuild it on a considerably larger scale, from designs by G. R. Crickmay esq. of Weymouth. The register dates from the year 1833. The living is a vicarage; it is also endowed as required by the act, with £60, and from this endowment and the pew-rents arises the income; it is in the gift of five trustees and held by the Rev. Francis in the gift of five trustees and held by the Rev. Francis Pocock.

The town also contains the following chapels: Catholic, Congregational, Baptist, Wesleyan, Unitarian, Primitive Methodists and Society of Friends' meeting house.

The Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1879, is a handsome building in the Early English style, built of Purbeck stone with Bath stone facings, being nearly square, it posesses a broad and commanding frontage with double tracery windows: it contains nave and transepts, which are divided into three bays and separated by three massive granite columns with elaborately carved capitals: the galleries are spacious and well arranged, the recess containing a large circular stained window: an elegant yet simply treated tower of Bath stone rising to a height of 90 feet unites the front and side elevations at the south angle: the unites the front and side elevations at the south angle: the roof and internal fittings are of pitch pine, the building is heated by hot water and is well ventilated; it will seat about 1,000 persons.

The Guildhall, in the market place, is a spacious and convenient structure, of red brick with stone dressings, erected in 1761, at a cost of £1,500 (presented to the Corporation for that purpose, in equal proportions, by Joseph Gulston and Thomas Calcraft esqrs. then representatives of the borough), and comprises a council chamber, a large hall of justice, and retiring rooms for the jury, having on the basement a series of open arcades, occupied only on market day (Thursday). The entrance to the hall is by a double flight of stone aters on the exterior of the building, leading to a of stone steps on the exterior of the building, leading to a portico beneath a pediment, at the west end of the building. The judicial business of the borough, in the quarter sessions and other courts, is transacted in this hall, and the public meetings of the town are generally held here. The entire

The town possesses a public library, aituated at the lower end of High street, near the quay: the site was given by Benjamin Lester esq. and the building erected in 1830 by the Hon. W. F. S. Ponsonby, afterwards Lord de Mauley; there are also Literary and Mechanics' Institutes, well supported. ported.

The market day is every Thursday. Two fairs are beld in the town—that of St. Philip and St. James commencing on the 1st of May, and All Saints on November 2ad; each continues eight days.

Shipbuilding is carried on, and some very fast yachts have been built here. Ships of considerable tonnage can lie afoat at low water close to the quay. Cordage, netting, sail-cloth, and other articles requisite for the fitting out of shipping, are largely made here.

clay has for a long period been shipped hence for the Staffordshire potteries; large potteries have also sprang up here; aix of considerable size are in work, and have a very large and lucrative trade. Mosaic and other decorated tiles are manufactured by the Architectural Pottery Company, whose works form a prominent object near the railway station at Hamworthy. The corn and flour trades are largely carried. at Hamworthy. The corn and flour trades are largely carried on : an extensive mill is at present in operation which is most complete of its kind, and supplies Cornwall and the West to a great extent. Here are two iron foundries, where a great number of hands are employed; they are extensively engaged in engineering, and in the manufacture of portable engine and agricultural implements.

The neighbourhood of Poole abounds in remains of British antiquities. Early earthworks and sepulchral berows are found on the hills. In the Iale of Purbeck, one hour's still from the quay, is the far-famed Agylestone, a Drakical sacrificial stone, computed to weigh 400 tons, standing on a mound of earth.

NORTH POORTON is a parish and village 2 miles north from Poorstock station, on the Bridport branch of the Great Western railway, 4 south-east from Beaminster and 5 north-east from Bridport, in the hundred of Beaminster Forum, Beaminster union, Bridport petty sessional division and county court district, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Bridport second portion. The church of St. Peter, a stone structure, has been entirely rebuilt in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave and small spire. The register dutes sists of chancel, nave and small spire. The register dates from the year 1675. The living is a rectory, yearly value £75, with 2 acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Rev. A. Pardoe and held by the Rev. Robert Scott McDowall M.A. Hallett Job, shopkeeper of Lincoln College, Oxford, who is curate of and resides at Powerstock. The Earl of Sandwich is the lord of the many and principal landowner. The soil is clay and sand; seb-soil, rocky. The chief crops are wheat, barley and onte. The area is 664 acres; rateable value, £739; and in 1871 the population was 88.

MYTHE hamlet is 14 miles north-west; Drakenorth is a high bill to the north-east.

Purish Clerk, Sylvester Gale.

PORTESHAM (or PORTISHAM) is a village and large agricultural parish 8 miles south-west from Dorchester, 129 from London and 7 north-west from Weymouth, in Weymouth union and county court district, petty sessional division of Dorchester, hundred of Uggescombe, diocese of Salisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Bridport first portion. A railway is now in course of construction passing through this parish of the second struction passing through this Bailboury, archiveaculty of Dorset and Tural dealery of Bridport first portion. A railway is now in course of construction, passing through this parish from Weymouth to Abbotsbury, all the earthworks of which are already completed. The church of St. Peter is an old Gothic building, which was restored in 1874, and consists of chancel, nave, uisles and square embattled tower. The register dates from the year 1567. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of William Manfield esq. and held by the Rev. William Henry Gorton B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a schoolroom and master's house, supported by subscriptions; the interest of £300, Masterman's charity, is applied for this school. In this neighbourhood are the remains of several Druidical temples: on RIDGE HILL, a short distance from the village, is a cromlech, or Druid's altar, the only one in the county; it is called the HELLSTONE and has been, restored: it consists of nine upright stones, with a horizontal one 11 feet long and 2 in thickness and stands on a barrow: near HELLSTONE are four upright stones. There are many barrows and many antiquities have been found at Corton. The principal landowners are Lord Fitzhardinge, who is lord of the manor, W. Manfield esq. Miss Chafyn Grove, Mrs. Cockeram, Mr. Crane and Mr. Samson. The chief crops are grass and corn. The soil is heavy clay. Here is a bed of about 100 acres of Purbeck and Portland stone about 100 feet thick, on the property of W. Manfield esq. The area is 4,540 acres; rateable value, £5,350; the population in 1871 was 744.

Corpe Gate (or Coryates), 1½ miles east, Shilving-Hampton, 2 miles south-east, and Waddon, 1 mile north-east, are small hamlets. There is a school at Corfe Gate.

PORTLAND.

PORTLAND is a small island, or, more properly speaking, peninsula, situated in the English Channel, 4½ miles south from Weymouth and 147½ from London, situated 2° 20' west from the meridian of Greenwich, and in 50° 30' north latitade, in the petty sessional division of Dorchester, Weymouth union and county court district, Dorchester raral deanery second portion, Dorset archdeacoury and Salisbury diocese, united to the mainland by the long ridge of chessel or shingle called CHESIL BANK. The island is 45 miles in length, 14 in width and 9 in circumference and the boundary is formed by a ridge of lofty rocks, inaccessible on all sides, except towards the south, where the land slopes away to the shore: the highest ground is 496 feet above the sea. It contains several villages or hamlets, viz:—CHESIL, FORTUNE'S WELL, CASTLETON, MAIDENWELL, BASTON, REPORNE, WAKEHAM, WESTON, SOUTHWELL, GROVE, YEATS, AND VERNE HUTS, and is governed by a Local Board of Health of 18 members. It is one complete bed of stone, which was first brought into use in the reign of James I. St. Paul's Cathedral and many of our public buildings have been built with it: at present 70,000 tons are shipped yearly from the quarries: the stones are from two to fourteen tone each, and are conveyed to the ships by means of a rallway: the whole stratum rests upon a bed of bluish clay: in the quarries are found many petri-fied shells and fossils. There are many curiosities in the island, amongst which may be seen a fine specimen of a fossil tree, standing near the 'Portland Arms;' it is 20 feet in height, with two branches in the form of the letter V In neight, with two branches in the form of the letter V. The fessil remains of a wild boar have been discovered and are now in the possession of Capusin Manning. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the quarries and are a hardy race of people. The soil is shallow but fruitful and the sheep fed on the short grass produce the celebrated Portland mutton, so justly esteemed for its delicacy and fine flavour. A small delicious bird, the wheatear, is found here in wreat numbers. Water is plentiful. flavour. A small collections wire, are when the state in great numbers. Water is plentiful.

A railway from Portland to Weymouth is used jointly by the Great Western and the South Western railways.

Portland Castle, situated at the foot of the loftiest part of the island, was erected by King Henry VIII. in 1520, as a place of defence: from 1558 to 1646 it suffered many disasters, being constantly taken and retaken by the King and the Parliament: in 1818 it was granted to the Rev. John Manning by the Duke of York, and since the accession of her Mejesty Queen Victoria the Castle has been appropriated to the Commander of the Engineers stationed here, but is not used, except as a store: the walls are in some parts from 12 to 14 feet thick.

The island is a liberty of itself, in the Weymouth union. The custom of gavelkind prevails here.

Here is in existence a grant fund, arising from a grant made by Charles II. In 1665, by which a royalty of 9d. for every ton of stone quarried from all parish or commonable lastd is payable for the use of the lahabitants, and by subsequent grants a further sum of 6d. was charged on stone regised from all Crown quarries being for the Royal use: but this latter grant was withdrawn in 1878.

One of the most prominent objects on this island is the Convict Prison, situated on the top of the hill, in a locality Convict Prison, attuates on the top of the hin, in a locality called Grove, commanding a bold and magnificent view of the Channel: the building is chiefly constructed of wood and iron, so that it may be taken down and removed: it now contains about 1,600 convicts, who are chiefly employed in the stone quarries in getting stone and loading the waggons with the same, for export

The parish church of St. George is a plain stone building, and consists of a deep chancel with apse, nave, north and south transepts: a handsome stained window was put in by Christopher Lano, as a thank offering, in 1878: it is capable of seating 700 persons: it was erected in the year 1766. The register dates from the year 1766. The living is a rectory, yearly value £320, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held by the Rev. John Augustine Beazor, of St. Augustine College, Canterbury.

The lower church, St. John the Baptist, was erected in 1839, and a district was assigned to it in 1840; the foundation-stone was laid by Captain Manning: it is a Gothic structure, with chancel, nave and square tower. The register dates from the year 1839. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Hyndman's trustees, and held by the Rev. Thomas Alfred Ottley B.D. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. The area is 1,000 acres; the population in 1871 was 4,610.

The church of St. Peter is a modern stone building principally for the prison officials, consisting of apsidal chancel, cipally for the prison officials, consisting of apsidal chancel, nave, north and south transept, built by convict labour, after the designs of Sir Edmund Ducane, at a cost of £1,900; the Rev. William Appleford B.A. chaplain of convict prison is in abours. vict prison, is in charge.

St. Andrew's church, opened July 3rd, 1879, was erected to commemorate the loss of the "Avalanche," with all hands, off this island, September 11th, 1877, by collision with the "Forest:" it is built in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave, baptistery, porch and bell-turret with 2 bells : it contains several stained windows. Here are Catholic, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist, Congregational, and Bible Christian places of worship. Here is a seamen's mission room, at which divine service is held on Sunday and Wednesday nights, and which is also used as a free library and reading room.

Gas Works have been established here.

On the east side of the island is Rufus Castle, belonging to and forming part of the grounds of Pennsylvania Castle, which was late the property of Granville J. Penn esq. of Stoke Park, Buckinghamshire, but belonging since his death, to his relative, Stewart Forbes esq. The castle is a handsome stone edifice, built by the late John Penn esq. of Stoke Park, Bucks (governor of the Isle of Portland), from designs by the celebrated architect, Mr. James Wyatt: it was commenced at the end of the last century, and finished in 1800: it is charmingly situated and commands magnificent views of the Chappel. On the east side of the island is Rufus Castle, belonging of the Channel.

A Dispensary has been established for the benefit of the labouring population; her Majesty is the patroness. At Straits there is a reading room and library. The principal hotels are the "Victoria" and the "Royal" and the "Portnotes are the "Victoria" and the "Royal" and the "Portland Arms," where King George III. often dined while at Weymouth. The island has ready access to Weymouth by rail and water, being within three miles; steamers run every half-hour during the summer months.

There are two lighthouses, one of which is built in the form of a cone, the diameter at the base being 20 feet; from the gallery is seen that dangerous sea called the Race, so named from the tides meeting at this part of the island; also the Shambles; the upper lighthouse was erected in 1817, upon the revolving principle: it consists of 14 lights and reflectors.

The design of a breakwater was first mooted by Mr. John Harvey, of Weymouth, his attention being directed to this subject in the year 1794, but it was not until 1847 that an Act was passed for the construction of the breakwater in the Portland Roads, to form a harbour of refuge: the breakwater extends from the north-east point of the island to a distance of 21 miles into the sea, and forms a roadstead 4 miles in extent, within which a fleet of 200 sail can lie at anchor in complete safety, sheltered from all winds in the Channel, and be ready for sea at a moment's notice in case of emergency; the extent of it is 12 miles long, 120 feet wide at low water level and upwards of 300 feet at the base. There is a small fortification at the land end, mounting a few guns; and at the extremity a larger circular fort, capable of mounting 21 heavy rifled guns. The barbour of refuge thus completed is now almost entirely enclosed by this stupendous sea-wall, covering an extent of no less than 2,100 acres.

To protect the harbour and roadstead, extensive fortifica-tions have been erected on the top and sides of the hill called the "Verne," on the northern side of the island; here a 36-gun-battery has been constructed and an artificial ravine

POWERSTOCK (or POORSTOCK) is a parish, having a station on the Bridport branch of the Great Western railway, station on the Bridgort branch of the Great Western railway, partly in the hundred of Eggardon, but chiefly in the liberty of Powerstock, Beaminster union, Bridgort petty sessional division and county court district, diocese of Salisbury, archedeaconry of Dorset, and rural deanery of Bridgort second portion, 4 miles north-east-by-north from Bridgort and 6 south-east from Beaminster. The church of St. Mary has been well restored, at a cost of about £2,200: it consists of a chancel, nave, aisles, tower and north porch: there is a a chancel, nave, asses, tower and norm porch: there is a very fine Norman chancel arch, which has been preserved, and also a handsome south doorway: the chancel contains six good stained windows. The register dates from the year 1566. The living is a discharged vicarage, with West Milton annexed, joint yearly value, £300, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, and held but the Ven. Thomas Sanctuary w.A. of Exeter College. by the Ven. Thomas Sanctuary M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, archdeacon of Dorset, and canon residentiary in Salisbury Cathedral. The poor's land produces £2 5s. yearly for bread. Here was formerly a market. There is a hill named Eggandon, which contains two Roman camps, at the extremity of the Roman road from Dorchester: the hill is partly in Powerstock, and partly in Litton parish. The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is very much varied; limestone, sandy loam, clay and chalk; subsoil, rocky. The chief crops are wheat, barley, flax and grass. The area is 4,123 acres; rateable value, £4,821. The population in 1871, with the tithings, was 1,061.

WYTHERSTONE is a tithing, I mile north-east of Power-stock; here is an extensive cutting on the Bridport railway. There is no church, but the living is a decayed rectory, yearly value £75, in the gift of Henry Compton esq. and held by the Rev. Paulet Mildmay Compton, of Mapperton.

South Poorton is a tithing, in that part of the parish which is in the hundred of Eggardon, 1 mile north.

West Milton is a hamlet, in the parish and liberty of Powerstock, though locally in the hundred of Eggardon, 1 mile west, on the river Asker. Here is a chapel of ease (St.

mile west, on the river Asker. Here is a chapel of ease (St. Mary Magdalene) to Powerstock church, erected in 1873, in the Early English style; it consists of chancel, nave, and small tower and baptistry: all the windows are stained. Nettlecombe and Castle Mill form a tithing, in the parish and liberty of Powerstock, locally in the hundred of Eggardon, 1½ miles south: it contains a fine old manor house, called Mapperconbe, now a farmhouse, divid-d into two portions. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. The railway station is in this tithing.

LOGOMBE, a portion of this parish, now forms a part of the ecclesiastical parish of Melplash.

PRESTON is a pretty village and parish, with the liberty of SUTTON POYNTZ, 34 miles north-east from Weymouth, in Culliford Tree hundred, petty sessional division of Dorchester, Weymouth union and county court district, diocese of Selisbury, archdeaconry of Dorset and rural deanery of Dorchester second portion, situate on the coast of Weymouth Bay, and on the road from Melcombe Regis to Warsham. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient fabric, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, and square tower containing 5 bells: there is an south aisie, and square tower containing 5 bells: there is an entique font; the church has been restored, and two handsome stained windows erected. The register dates from the year 1693. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Salisbury, and held by the Rev. Arthur Hill B.D. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. In a meadow by the stream below the church are the remains of a Roman villa, consisting of the foundations of the walls of two small rooms, and of a well preserved tesselated pavement, which occupied originally an area 18 feet square; the materials used are small cases of hard chalk, burnt earth or brick, and umber; the pattern comists of a central ornament, elightly resembling a Tuder rose, in a square, on each side of which run two guillaches or spales with a pattlinear forms heart and on rose, in a square, on each side of which run two guilleches or cables, with a rectilinear figure between them; and on the south side there is, besides, a row of heart-shepd figures: it was discovered by Mr. Medburst, in 1843, and permanently uncovered for the inspection, at the congress at Weymouth, of the British Archesological Association in 1871. George Tilley Gollop, esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner of Preston. The soil is heavy clay, subsoil various. The chief crops are grass, wheat and barley. The area is 2,679 acres, rateable value, £4.665; the population in 1871 was 747.

SUTTON POYNTZ, half a mile north, was a liberty or free manor of the Poyntses, an ancient family in the western parts; Weymouth is supplied with water from a spring rising in this hamlet. Reginald Joseph Weld esq. of Lul-worth Castle, is lord of the manor and chief landowner of Sutton Poyntz.
